Action of the Government in Relation to the Apaches—White Encroachments on the Reservations.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The formal orders necessary to carry out the policy agreed upon at the conference between the President, the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of War in regard to the treatment of the Arizona Indians have been prepared. The Secretary of the Interior has written a letter to the President which recites the details of the policy to be pursued, and asks to have orders sent to the military commander instructing them as to the course which will fall to them to perform. These instructions go from the President through the War Department, and were prepared by Gen. SHERMAN. Today the outline of the plan arranged for the suppression of Indian disorders in Arizona may be briefly drawn. It is believed that putting a stop to outrages by the Apaches is a matter of good administration alone. The orders given look to harmonious and united action by the military forces and the agents of the Indian Office. Gen. CROOK is, in the first place, to circulate among both whites and Indians, a notice that the latter must go on their reservations; that the Government cannot permit them longer to send their old men and women and children on to the reservations, to be fed and taken care of, while their young men go on the war path; that all who go upon reservations shall be protected and fed by the Government to the full extent of its power, but that those who stay away from the reservations, and commit murders and depredations, shall be punished by the soldiers. The soldiers and agents will disseminate this notice as widely as possible, and give the Indians an opportunity to comply with its requirements. It is sent among the whites also, that they may understand what the Government is doing, and be deterred from attempting to imitate the Camp Grant massacre. The operations of all the Government officers will be directed to enforcing on both parties compliance with the terms of the notice. An army officer will be appointed Superintendent at each reservation until the Interior Department is ready to take charge of the Indians. Superintendent RANDALL is directed by the Secretary of the Interior to have his head-quarters with Gen. CROOK, and the two are expected to counter and work together. If both generous and threats fail to induce the warriors to accept the terms of the Government, then Gen. CROOK will have an opportunity to engage in a vigorous campaign, in which he will not be hampered and restrained and blindfolds thwarted by the agents of the Peace Commission, because they have consented in advance to the policy. It is hoped that, with the exercise of good judgment and a wise discretion by the officers of the Government in the execution of their orders, Indian outrages in Arizona, at least, may be hereafter suppressed.

The white settlers near the Indian territory seem determined to steal the Indian lands. They seem possessed with the idea that speedy extermination surely awaits the red men, and that those who have secured judgment on their territory will do so to their profit. The various warnings given them by the Secretary of the Interior have not had the desired effect to cause them to leave. It has come to this, that the preservation of the faith of the Government with the Indians in the interests of peace requires that those who settle upon Indian lands contrary to treaty stipulations shall be removed, and it is probable that a call will soon be made upon the War Department to see that their removal is made.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

Delegate MCCORMICK, of Arizona, who has been in consultation, during the present week, with President GRANT, Gen. SHERMAN and the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Interior, is understood to say that the new programme for the control of the Indians in Arizona will be satisfactory to his constituents if strongly adhered to, and Gen. CROOK is detained in his dealing with the hostile Indians. The Fifth Cavalry is ordered to Arizona to relieve the Third, and will proceed there at once. Mr. MCCORMICK has proceeded against certain acts of Mr. COLTER during his visit to Arizona, and says he is satisfied that they were not authorized and are not approved by the President. He denies that there was any purpose on the part of his constituents to misuse Mr. COLTER, and says they do not wish for war measures an hour longer than is necessary to convince the Apaches that they must cease their robberies and murders. The Arizonians object, however, to the assertion that these Indians, as a class, are honest and peaceably disposed, or ever have been.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The Board of Indian Commissioners have received a letter from Lieut. WHITMAN, dated Camp Grant, Oct. 17. He is in charge of the new reservation established by VINCENT COLTER, and says:

"Everything with the Indians here goes on as well as could be hoped for. I have now over 500 Indians, all that live of those who were here previous to the massacre of April 30, with a large and daily increase of Final Apaches. They grow more cheerful and easy in their general behavior. Our prospects are flattering. I can sure of from 800 to 1,000 Indians by December. If the Winter could be spent in convincing them there is comfort, safety and help in settlement for them here, and just punishment for them if they break faith, I am sure they will remain. The Press here is reviving all the old, manufactured tales of evidences of depredations from this post previous to the massacre, and foretell coming horrors from the same source. There is no truth in them. The Members and Corsteros of COCHISE'S band of Apaches, who have been for some time past in the habit of coming in at the Mexican town of Canada Alamosa, near the Rio Grande, in New-Mexico, and where they have recently been fed, and the Agency temporarily located, refuse to go to the new reservation in Aravaca Valley, selected for them by Mr. COLTER. COCHISE himself is quite willing to go there, but the sub Ch'efs, LOCO and VICTORIA, under the influence of the Mexicans, about 200 of whom reside in the town, and who carry on a considerable trade with them in ammunition, whiskey, &c., in exchange for their buck-skins, prevent it. Superintendent FORD recommended that the agency and provisions be removed to the Tularosa, which is a beautiful, secluded valley about fifty miles west of their present location, in the belief that the Apaches would follow, but was the worst. Mr. FORD, was afraid the Indians would scatter and go upon the war-path again, the President has directed that they should be allowed to remain where they are for the present."

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

A Train Wrecked in Indiana—Ten Persons more or less Injured.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 9.—A passenger-train of the Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Junction Railroad was thrown from the track by a cow west of Liberty, Ind., this afternoon, wrecking the engine, tender, baggage, passenger, and Pullman's sleeping-cars. Ten persons are reported seriously injured. As soon as the news reached Liberty the citizens promptly repaired to the scene and conveyed the sufferers to residences, where everything possible was done to alleviate their sufferings. The train was terribly wrecked, and it is surprising that no one was killed. No blame is attached to those in charge of the train.

A DESPERADO AT LARGE.

Escape of a Negro Convicted of Murder in North Carolina—Reward for His Capture.

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 9.—Gov. CALDWELL has received a letter from the Sheriff of Nash County informing him that a notorious negro desperado and condemned murderer, named LUKE JOHNSON, who was to have been executed on the 24th inst., has escaped from the jail of that county. JOHNSON had been confined for six months on the charge of horse-stealing and burglary when the evidence against him for the murder of another negro, named JERRY TAYLOR, was discovered. The latter was an important witness against JOHNSON in a former burglary case, and while eating his supper was shot through the crevice between the logs of his house and instantly killed. In addition to the other indictment pending a true bill was also found against him for the murder of TAYLOR, on which he was tried, convicted, and sentenced to be executed at the last term of the Nash Superior Court. TAYLOR was murdered in the Spring of 1866, and during the time that elapsed from the commission of the deed to the apprehension of JOHNSON, the latter had been committing depredations of the most desperate character, and he inspired such a terror in the neighborhood that few would dare to testify against him until his arrest for horse-stealing. He is large and powerfully built, with a bull-neck, small head and ears, and weighs about 180 pounds; is thirty-one years of age, high forehead, and color between brown and black. A reward will be offered for his capture.

THE GROSVENOR HOMICIDE.

Charge of Judge Williams in Chicago—Shall Gen. Sheridan be Indicted?—Who has a Right to Instruct the Grand Jury?

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 9.—In his address to the Grand Jury, Judge WILLIAMS touched upon the killing of Col. GROSVENOR, and referred to letters published purporting to come from Gov. PALMER in relation to the indictment of Lieut.-Gen. SHERIDAN, Major MASON, and others. He says they should find no bill against any party except on the information of two of their number who have a personal knowledge of the facts. Neither the prosecuting attorney nor the Court has a right to instruct them as to whom they should indict. It would be dangerous to private rights and an invasion of your prerogatives if over the Court should advise you whom you should indict, and if this Court may not do it, far less may any person who does not sustain to you any official relations. Should anyone not of your body seek to influence you by written, printed or verbal communications to any one of you, you will inform the Court that the offender may be dealt with for contempt. Neither will you permit yourselves to be affected by any communications printed or to be printed in, nor any editorials written or to be written for, any paper published here or elsewhere. More particularly ought I to warn you against being influenced by certain letters published in certain papers of all our city papers, purporting to have been written by the Executive of this State to the Attorney-General and District-Attorney of this circuit, advising the indictment of certain persons named therein. Purporting to be letters of the Governor, and having been extensively circulated, your Grand Jury and Chief Magistrate personally, and for his official relations, might lead you to attach to them great weight, but they should not exert any influence upon you whatever. The prosecuting attorney of this Court informs me that he knew nothing of the letters until he discovered so him until he saw it published in the city papers. If it was written by the Governor, it is only a private letter to the District-Attorney, and should have been in his hands before it was given to the papers. It would be inconsistent with the high reputation of our Chief Magistrate for integrity and legal learning to suppose that he designed that they should be published, in order to influence your action as a Grand Jury. The possibility that such would be their effect would be enough to deter him from giving them to the public. You ought not to assume that the respected Chief Magistrate of the State intended to do this highly indecorous and improper in any individual, above all in one whose duties are judicial.

THE PACIFIC SLOPE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 9.—Judge LEPURVEAU delivered an impressive charge to the Grand Jury at Los Angeles today, urging them to avoid prejudice, and sustain the cause of law, order and morality by indicting the perpetrators of the recent atrocious massacre of Chinese. ....The remains of the wife and child of BUCKSKIN, alias Pyburn, the desperado who was shot near San Rafael, Lower California, by the Sheriff of Los Angeles, some months since, have been found near Guadaloupe Ranch. It is supposed the woman became insane, and wandered away and died.

Earthquake in Colorado.

DENVER, Colorado, Nov. 9.—Georgetown and Central City experienced a slight shock of earthquake at 10½ this morning, lasting from ten to fifteen seconds in each place. No damage was done, although doors and windows were considerably rattled, and people surprised, and in some cases, alarmed. The shock was not felt at Denver in the least.

General Council of the Lutheran Church.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 9.—Messrs. GEO. H. MORLEIN, of New-York, and THOMAS H. LAMB, of Pittsburg, were today elected additional trustees under the provisions of the charter of the General Council of the Lutheran Church. The rebuilding of the Church of Mercy in Chicago, was committed to the care of the Southern Mission and Church Extension Society. The establishment of a Theological Seminary in Chicago was postponed until next year. The next session of the Council will be held in Akron, Ohio, commencing on the first Thursday of November, 1872.

The Witnesses Against Brigham Young for Murder.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 9.—Notwithstanding the Grand Jury and officers of Court have kept their secrets wonderfully well, it is now ascertained that the indictments against BRIGHAM YOUNG, Mayor WELLS and HOSEA STOUT for murder, were not found upon the sole testimony of BILL HICKMAN, the so-called destroying angel. It is known that on the trial witnesses will be produced for the prosecution not implicated in the charge at all, who, it is said, will testify about all that HICKMAN has sworn to and perhaps more.

WASHINGTON.

Pennsylvania Office Seekers Swarming in the Capital—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Of all people to assemble for office the Pennsylvanians are the worst. The removal of one officer and the death of another in Philadelphia, within the past few days, have brought a swarm of persons here interested in the various applicants. The oldest now is over the position of United States Marshal, made vacant by the death of Gen. GREGORY. Senators CAMERON and SCOTT are both on the ground, and will, doubtless, have a deciding influence in dictating the appointment. As to the vacancy caused by the resignation of Assessor STOKELY, and by the transfer of Collector SICKEL to the Pension Office, it is believed that the President will disappoint the applicants by consolidating the districts.

THE NEW-LONDON POST-OFFICE.

The plans which were submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury for the removal of the Post-office at New-London to the Custom-House, have been disapproved.

THE SUPREME COURT.

Appointment of Hon. Samuel Jackson by the Governor—His Letter Announcing the Fact.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 9.—Gov. HOFFMAN has appointed Hon. SAMUEL JACKSON, of Schenectady, Judge of the Supreme Court in the Fourth Judicial District. The following is the Governor's letter:

STATE OF NEW-YORK,
EXECUTIVE CHAMBER,
ALBANY, Nov. 7, 1871.

DEAR SIR: The resignation of Judge ROSEKRANS, the day before the annual election of 1871, raises the question, under section 2 of article 6 of the Constitution, whether Mr. POTTER, who in 18—, announced received the majority of votes cast at that election, could take office under it. It being claimed by Judge ROSEKRANS and others, as I am informed, as the election occurred three months after the happening of the vacancy, it was of no effect and that the vacancy can only be filled by appointment of the Governor, to hold office to Dec. 31, 1872. If the question thus presented could be settled or avoided by the appointment of the successful candidate the voice of the Bar and the interests of the public would demand of me that I should appoint him, to the end that there might be no undue strife over a judicial office, and that the will of the people as expressed at the ballot-box should not be defeated by the resignation of Judge ROSEKRANS, and I should appoint him at once; but it is clear that neither such appointment nor the failure to make any would avoid the issue; it would only postpone it. As the election in 1873, some one would probably be voted for, and contest Mr. POTTER'S election during the election of 1871 to have been void, and that the appointment from the Governor expired Dec. 31, 1872. The admitted purpose of Judge ROSEKRANS' resignation was to raise this question, and to defeat Mr. POTTER'S election, and it must be met and decided sooner or later. It is important it should be decided as early as possible. You were the minority candidate at the late election, and your qualifications for the office are unquestioned. I therefore today invited you, and Hon. MATTHEW HALE, counsel for Mr. POTTER, to meet me at the Executive Chamber, and am glad to know that you both see the force of my suggestions. I therefore appoint you to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Judge ROSEKRANS, in the belief that you and Mr. POTTER will be able to procure an early judicial construction of the section of the Constitution before referred to. I think this can be done early enough to prevent any unnecessary conflict in the Judicial District. If so, my object will be attained. Very truly yours,

(Signed) JOHN T. HOFFMAN.

To SAMUEL W. JACKSON.

Thanksgiving Proclamation of Gov. Fairchild, of Wisconsin.

That another year of plenty, general health and prosperity has been vouchsafed to the people of this State, we should thankfully recognize, and although a wide-spread conflagration in the North-eastern portion of the State has desolated many Household Homes, and left in misery to many families, and stripped thousands of our fellow-citizens of nearly all their worldly wealth, yet even the poorest and most deeply bereaved of these sufferers have found millions of hearts throughout the whole land, extending to them the most earnest sympathy, and millions of hands moved to relieve their wants by liberal gifts.

For God's loving kindness to us during the year soon to close, and for this outpouring of Christian benevolence and charity to our afflicted neighbors, we should unite in rendering to the pious usages of our fathers, publicly unto Him who moves the hearts of men to generous deeds.

Therefore, I, LUCIUS FAIRCHILD, Governor of the State of Wisconsin, do hereby recommend to the people of this State that they observe Thursday, Nov. 30, instant, as a day of public thanksgiving, prayer and praise.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State, at the Capitol, in Madison, this [L. S.] sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand, eight hundred and seventy-one.

By the Governor. LUCIUS FAIRCHILD.

Indictments Against Lottery-Dealers in San Francisco.

From the San Francisco Alta, Nov. 1.

Under instructions from the County Court, the Grand Jury, now in session, have devoted considerable attention to the violation of the Lottery act. For several months past, Police officers detailed for the work by Chief CROWLEY, have gathered all the information and evidence necessary, and which will results in the breaking up, so far as this city is concerned, at least, all lottery schemes that have been or may be projected. Yesterday the Grand Jury came into Court and presented 120 indictments against the managers, agents and subagents of nine different lottery schemes, known respectively as the Emigrant Aid Society, Brooklyn Woodland, Calaveras, People's, Grass Valley, Pioneer, Folsom and Placerville. Bench warrants were issued for their arrests, and bail fixed at $500 in each case. Against one man there are fourteen indictments.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

RONDOUT, Ulster County, Nov. 9.—While you mention large Republican gains in some counties, our County of Ulster must not be overlooked. The Republican State ticket has 200 majority, a clear gain of 1,300 over last year. We have also elected all three of the Republican Assemblymen, and the indications this afternoon are that our State Senator (SANDERSON, of Greene County) is elected over HARDENBURGH by a small majority—almost too good to be true; still it is not improbable.

Schenectady County Republican.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 9.—Schenectady County elects WM. GREENHALGH, Republican, as member of the Assembly, by 300 majority, and gives the Republican State ticket a majority of 200.

The Judicial Ticket in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 9.—The official count shows that JAMES [illegible], Republican, has been elected Judge of the Superior Court instead of GEORGE WADSWORTH, Republican, as before reported. SHELDON leads WADSWORTH five votes. GEORGE CLINTON, Democrat, the other Judge elected to the Superior Court, ran over 600 ahead of all competitors. The Republicans here have been remarkably quiet over their great victory. Serenading and cannon salutes are indulged in, but there is no offensive "twitting" of political opponents.

The Indiana Editor Who Fell from a Balloon.

From the Terre Haute (Ind.) Gazette, Nov. 7.

Mr. GEORGE H. KNAPP, editor of the Orange County Union, Paoli, this State, is in the city today, stopping at his mother's, who resides here and is well known. Mr. KNAPP gave us a call this forenoon. He is the gentleman who fell from the balloon from which Prof. WILMER fell so frightful a distance and was killed at the Orange County Fair. His hands and one foot are yet very painfully affected, though he is rapidly convalescing. From his own statements we learn that he had one of the ropes coiled around his hand when the balloon was loosed, but that he at once commenced to unwind the rope, and by the time he was twenty-five feet from the ground he had extricated himself, and fell with a rapidly accelerating motion until he reached the earth, alighting on his left foot, which was badly crushed; his hands were terribly lacerated by slipping along the rope about fifteen feet. The Professor was holding to a short string or rope, which was fastened to the wicket by a "snap." This strap the Professor clung to with great tenacity until he became a mere speck in the sky, in the meantime frantically endeavoring to get into the basket, without avail. The rest of this terrible calamity is familiar to our readers, and we will not refer to it further.

POLITICAL NOTES.

The official vote of Baltimore for Governor is: Town, Republican, 14,763; WHYTE, Democrat, 22,674.

The Elmira Advertiser suggests THOMAS G. ALVORD, of Onondaga, for Speaker of the new Assembly.

Hon. CARL SCHURZ has received and declined an invitation to speak in New-Orleans before the meeting of Congress.

The Connecticut Temperance men have called a Convention to be held in New-Haven Dec. 13, to nominate a State ticket.

Later returns show that Republican Assemblymen have been chosen from Schenectady and Warren Counties.

Acting Gov. CONLEY, of Georgia, has revoked all of Gov. BULLOCH'S numerous proclamations offering rewards for the apprehension of criminals.

The vote for Assistant Alderman in the Seventeenth District was as follows: STEPHEN M. SIMONSON, Republican and Reform, 8,550; FRITSEN, Tammany, 2,740; WAGNER, Democratic Union, 1,621.

Returns from 287 of the 340 towns in Massachusetts, published by the Boston Journal, show this result: For WASHBURN, Republican, 74,170; ADAMS, Democrat, 47,226; CHAMBERLIN, Labor Form, 6,862; PITMAN, Prohibition, 6,390.

ENOCH H. ROSEKRANS, Justice of the Supreme Court of the Fourth Judicial District, filed his resignation in the office of the Secretary of State on Monday. His term of office would have expired on the 31st of December next.

St. Louis expects both the Republican and Democratic National Conventions to be held there, and proposes to erect a wigwam for their accommodation, and for the use of the National Sanegerines, to meet there in June, 1872.

A large number of citizens of Oil City, Penn., have formally invited Senator CAMERON to make "a semi-official visit" to the oil regions. He has accepted, and now it is hoped that he will so time his visit that Prince ALEXIS may accompany him.

Thirty-eight Democratic papers in Missouri have published articles favoring the "passive policy" in the next Presidential contest. They include such very influential and widely-known journals as the Nodaway Democrat, the Moberly Monitor, and the Sturgeon Leader.

Alluding to the defeat of its party, the Schenectady Star says: "It is possible that the man who clamored so loudly for renomination at Rochester may now feel that those who demanded a new ticket understood the sentiments of the people of the State better than the candidates themselves."

A Georgia paper lucidly argues that the Legislature of that State cannot order a special election for Governor, because the State Constitution provides that the returns of an election for Governor shall be laid before the Senate on the day after the two houses have organized. It says that upon the supposition that it will take one entire day to effect an organization, there will be but one day in which to pass the law authorizing the election, to hold it, and to make the returns thereof to the Senate.

The Republicans of Maryland were successful on Tuesday in Allegany, Washington, Frederick, and Cecil Counties. They were defeated in Anne Arundel by the manipulation of the registration lists, and the importation of voters from Baltimore. As we last heard from them they have elected one Senator and fourteen members of the House of Delegates. The Senator is from Frederick, Dr. LEWIS H. STEINER, and the members of the House of Delegates comprise five from Frederick, four from Allegany, three from Washington, one from Cecil, and one from Caroline.

The election of Mr. HENRY H. FAXON, as representative from Quincy to the Massachusetts Legislature, is a noticeable event of the canvass. The Boston Traveller says: "Neither of the candidates had the full vote of his own party. Nearly fifty Republicans, disliking the position of Mr. FAXON on the temperance question, voted for his opponent, but this defficiency was more than made up by the votes of respectable Democrats. There were seven tickets in the field, and much excitement at the polls. Mr. FAXON is a large owner of real estate, and one of the incidents of the election was the hanging on a tree in front of the Town Hall, of the effigy of a man bearing the placards, 'High Rents and Prohibition.' The two candidates are prominent politicians, and but for a split in the Democratic party, the contest would have been a very close one. Mr. ADAMS is much esteemed among his townsmen for his fairness in politics and in local matters, and Mr. FAXON has secured the good will and esteem of the better class of citizens by his frequent donations to the poor, and to the charitable, religious and temperance organizations of the town."

GEORGIA.

Message of the Acting Governor—Recommendations Regarding the State Debt—Taxation and the Preservation of Good Order.

Hon. BENJAMIN CONLEY, President of the Senate of Georgia, and by reason of the resignation of Gov. BULLOCH acting Governor of the State, sent his first message to the Legislature on the 4th inst. It is a calm, sensible document, and on the interesting portion says:

"While it is well known to you and the people of Georgia that I have been, and am now, a conservative and unyielding Republican, I shall not, in the discharge of my Executive duties, permit parties to have anything to do with my conduct. While in my present office, I am Governor of the people of the whole State, without regard to party distinctions; and I invite all, without reference to race, color, or party alliance, who may have business connected with my department, to approach me freely; and make known their wishes at any time, with the assurance that I will do all in my power to promote the interest of each, in every matter pertaining to my official duties, to the extent of my ability. It seems to me that we have had enough of wrangling and strife, and crimination and recrimination. The country needs repose and quiet, which can never be promoted by sectionally fomenting political strife. We have had experience enough to demonstrate that nothing has been gained to the people of the South by the adoption of a defiant and bolster-ous course, while the power rests in the Government, backed by a vast majority of the people of the Union. Under these circumstances, it is my sincere wish that every department of the Government of this State, and every class of people, may so shape their conduct that there may be no reason for any declaration of martial law, any suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, or any further reconstruction. If the people of the South will be law-abiding and law enforcing, and lay aside all extreme measures, my opinion is that the day is not far distant when the Congress of the United States will proclaim by act universal amnesty, thereby restoring every citizen of the South to the full measure of citizenship, with all the rights pertaining to the same. This is a consummation devoutly to be hoped for at the earliest day possible."

Referring to the State debt, the Governor confesses his inability at this early day, and under the peculiar circumstances of the case, to give an accurate statement of its amount, or any exact information of the disposition or amount of the bonds issued under the authority of the last Legislature. He, however, says:

"While I regret that the liabilities have been increased to the amount already reached and would advise great caution upon this subject in the future, I cannot too strongly impress upon you the convictions of my own mind as to the importance of maintaining the public faith inviolate. No State in the Union has maintained a higher or more unsullied character for integrity and the faithful performance of her obligations in connection with all financial matters than our own beloved Georgia. And what may be the burdens to which we are now subject, and whether wisely or unwisely incurred, we should meet them with that spirit of integrity and honor which has always characterized the people of Georgia, and their representatives who have been entrusted with the intelligence, and integrity enough among them, to secure all the ends for which government is instituted and maintained. If we will take this course, we will have many of the elements which, at the present day, and will do much to restore confidence among our people, and secure immigration, the influx of capital, and the general development of the resources of the State, and will thereby remove all possible pretext for Federal interference of any character in our local affairs.

COLLIERY EXPLOSION.

The Recent Disaster at Seaham—Twenty-eight Lives Lost.

From the London Times, Oct. 28.

The fearful colliery explosion which occurred in Seaham Colliery on Wednesday night has caused the deaths of twenty-eight men and boys and a great number of horses, besides doing great damage to the colliery. The part of the pit where the explosion occurred is on fire, and, according to the latest advices, there is no prospect of recovering the remainder of the bodies of the lost men for some time to come. Seaham Colliery is situated about a mile from Seaham Harbor, and six miles from Sunderland. It is the property of Earl VANE. The explosion occurred about 11½ o'clock on Wednesday night, and was coincident with the firing of a shot by a steaneman named HUTCHINSON, who, with his son, was blasting a mass of stone-work in the drift in order to make a space for a portable standing engine, intending to be set up and used for the purpose of drawing coal up the incline of the drift to the upcast shaft. In the colliery village and at the neighboring town of Seaham Harbor the shock of the explosion was distinctly felt. Tables were knocked over, pots and pans knocked about, and the windows of one cottage fell out. Great alarm and consternation prevailed, the general opinion being that an earthquake had occurred. The older and more experienced pitmen, however, soon divined the real cause, and in a short time there was a large gathering at the pit shafts. The effects of the explosion showed themselves at the top of No. 8 shaft. Dense smoke was issuing, and the machinery had been thrown off gear and destroyed by the force of the explosion, which had here found vent. The masonry on the south side of the shaft had been blown down to the extent of 30 feet, the engine-house on the opposite side was also damaged, and the iron-work over the top of the shaft in connection with the pulleys was violently torn and twisted. Nos. 1 and 2 shafts, however, were uninjured, and were therefore available for the escape of those whom the explosion left alive, and for the special use of the volunteers into the pit afterward to ascertain the extent of the mischief, and to endeavor, if possible, to rescue those whom it was known were in the workings at the time when the pit fired, but of whose recovery alive no hopes from the very first were entertained. At the time of the explosion there were twenty-nine or thirty men and boys in the No. 8 pit, besides a number in the Nos. 1 and 2 pits, and nine boys, and most of them were at a distance of about a mile from the shaft. The workings extend in a northerly direction, and, so far as is at present known, all who were in that portion of the pit have been killed. Two men, indeed, were brought up alive, but both were so injured that they died within an hour of reaching the bank and the other is not expected to survive. All at work in the other parts of the pit, however, rushed to the shaft, and were happily saved. The principal colliery officials were soon on the spot, and taking measures for ascertaining the true state of matters below. There was great fear of another explosion, and men were rather backward in volunteering to descend the pit; but at length a noble example was set by some of the older men, who had unhappily had experience of former disasters of the kind. The first men went down about 12 o'clock. They found the air-courses interrupted and the air very foul, and had the greatest difficulty that they could proceed. They soon had evidence also of the destruction of life that had been the effect of the explosion. In the first place, they found the stone-man who had fired the shot, THOS. HUTCHINSON, 48 years of age; he was not far from the shaft, and was alive. He was severely burnt about the head, and the whole of his left hand was off, but however perfectly sensible, and was sent to bank and removed to his house in Model-row, where he was attended by Drs. BEATTIE and TAYLOR; but although he was alive at a late hour last evening, no hopes are entertained of his recovery. The explorers, near to 9 o'clock, next found the dead body of THOMAS HUTCHINSON, twenty-two years of age, son of the above, and who leaves a wife and two children. About the same time, ROBINSON HUNTER was found, alive, a few yards beyond HUTCHINSON, Jr., but he only lived for a short time after he reached the bank. He leaves a wife and two children. The body of CHARLES LAMB, the furnaceman, was next found near the furnace; he lived at Seaham Harbor, and his body was removed to his house. These were soon found, they all being near the shaft; but it was not until 11 o'clock yesterday morning that much further progress had been made. The next body found was that of THOMAS HUTCHINSON, forty, who leaves a wife and three children. The poor fellow presented a horrid spectacle; not a feature of his face was discernible, and his identity was only proved by his watch, which bore a label inside with his name upon it. The body was removed to his residence in Long-row. These are the whole of the bodies found up to the present time, and it is probable that weeks will elapse before the remaining four can be recovered. At 11:30 o'clock yesterday forenoon, exactly twelve hours after the explosion, the exploring party had reached about a mile and a half toward the face of the workings, where the men who are insured were employed. On reaching the stables they found these, the ponies were dead, of which fifteen had been saved out of the twenty-four men who were not accounted for. They were working three-quarters of a mile beyond that point, and it was then discovered that the seam of coal was on fire, and that the poor creatures must have been suffocated hours before. When this intelligence was brought back and conveyed to the crowd of people assembled round the pit mouth a very sorrowful scene occurred, such as can only be witnessed in a colliery district on an occasion like this, as all hope was then dissipated, and it was certain that the wives of those left below were widows and their children orphans. When last evening's journal, yesterday, was issued the seam of coal was on fire, and was considered, after consultation, that the only course open to them in dealing with such an unapproachable obstacle was to build such a wall as would hermetically seal that portion of the seam and prevent a supply of oxygen reaching it to feed the flames. A body of men were employed, and operations were set to work to accomplish this, and the moment the fire once sealed up, it may be many weeks before it will be deemed safe to reopen it for the purpose of exploring the three-quarters of a mile of workings beyond that point.

ENGLISH FINANCE.

Critiques on the Policy of the Directors of the Bank of England.

From the London [illegible] (City Article), Oct. 28.

In connection with the [illegible] of the five per cent. rate by the Bank of England, several pleas are likely to be raised that have nothing to do with the question, such as the necessity for protecting our stock of gold, the advantage of checking speculation, and, lastly, the probability that the Directors are aware of circumstances unknown to the general public. On the first of these, all that is to be said is that the Bank has no more to do with the protection of our gold supply than it has with the supervision of the law of gravitation. Under the operation of the act of 1844 the gold supply is provided for in a way which neither the Bank of England, nor all the banks in the world, nor the political arrangements of Prince BISMARCK or any other Minister can either aid or impede. The duty of the bank is simply the which is common to all other bankers, of making as much profit as possible for the proprietors without risk, and in that respect the preservation of a proper proportion of reserve to liabilities is one of the chief points to be kept in view. Let them attend, therefore, only to their own supply of notes, and not disquiet themselves about upholding the convertibility of the currency, with which they have no more concern than with the regulation of the tides. With regard to the next plea—the expediency of checking speculation—we must be borne in mind that this is not a function which has been deputed to any individual establishment, and that the best way to check speculation is for all men to manage their own business on solid principles, and thus to operate by example. Speculation sometimes achieves results highly beneficial to the community, and it would be bold for any person or body of persons to assume the responsibility of controlling it by artificial means. In the instance of the step just taken by the bank the result would be to sanction and encourage speculation instead of checking it, since the course of non-speculators in dealing with commodities as they have to dispose of is usually to follow on the heels of speculators as upon calculations of some contingency which they believe to be likely to happen. In proceeding the bank directors have now adopted, their impression being that the value of money will rise so as to compensate them for the present loss from not lending to employ it at existing rates. Should their calculations prove correct, they will have benefited the public in a manner analogous to that of a corn factor who holds back his wheat for a period of famine, but it would be idle to cite the transaction as a corrective for speculation. On the contrary, even before the time when its effect can be tested, there may be doubt as to whether it will not operate injuriously in that respect. A sham rate of five per cent., while the weekly accounts show an unusual plethora of resources, will excerse far less influence than would arise from a lower rate with the accounts in such a position as to indicate the possibility of an upward movement at any moment. Finally, as to the idea that the Bank must be in possession of knowledge not shared by other members of the financial world, and that this knowledge is such as would justify for its otherwise inexplicable course, nothing could be more absurd. The possibility of more information on large affairs is now out of the question, and, moreover, if the bank directors know of any peril of which the other members of the banking world were ignorant they would at once communicate it for the safety of all. The fact is, every one is aware that a large amount of Continental bills on London falls due next month, and each person makes his own estimate of the extent of perturbation it may create. The Bank of England evidently thinks it will be such as to render that it is a mistake just now to part with money on the terms obtainable for it. The other banks, with precisely the same means of forming an opinion, think it better to take now what they can get rather than to run the chance of realising something extraordinary in a week or two. Neither side is to be blamed for acting upon its opinions. The object of both must be identical—namely, that of realising the best profit which can be legitimately obtained. Recognizing this simple state of the case, people, it may be hoped, will not allow themselves to be confused by any of the fine respectable platitudes about "preserving the gold circulation," or the "putting a stop to speculation," or the "protection of the public" by the exercise of functions retained exclusively by a body of twenty-four directors, and used by them with profound mystery.

GERMANY AND AUSTRIA.

Late Imperial Interviews and Their significance.

The text of Count BEUST's circular to the Austrian diplomatic agents, explanatory of the Gastein and Salzburg interviews, appears in the Journal des Débats. The document is dated Sept. 13, 1871, and says:

"As you have learnt from the newspapers, the Emperor, our august master, has stayed a couple of days at Salzburg, in order to salute the Emperor WILLIAM on his passage through that place, and thus to return the visit of that Sovereign at Ischl. This exchange of courtesies indicates the complete restoration of the former relations of friendship between the two monarchs, and gives a sanction to the assurance unanimously given by the two Cabinets that the new organization of Germany was determined upon. In this point of view it is quite natural that to such facts an importance should be attributed which I am the first to admit. But at the same time I must require that the true character of these interviews be not misrepresented, and that they be not connected with combinations with which they have nothing to do. It is not a policy of surprise that has been prepared, and no special plan has been discussed, and still less settled. The communications exchanged between the Cabinets of Berlin and Vienna in the month of December last, and the programme of which I laid before the Delegations of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, continue to form the basis of our position toward other States. The meeting of the Sovereigns and their Ministers is but a simple consequence of the line of conduct then adopted with the approval of all. There is, therefore, not the slightest ground for any uneasiness, seeing that our position is exactly the same as it was before the interviews. I have equal pleasure in stating that the pourparlers to which those interviews gave rise have produced results which we cannot but regard as very satisfactory to ourselves, and, as I believe, to all Cabinets which, like us, are desirous of securing the peace of Europe on settled, upon a solid basis. Not only have my interviews with Prince BISMARCK made evident our sincere desire to contribute to the strengthening of the general peace and to prevent the revival of irritating questions which might disturb it, but, further, they have enabled us to recognize the perfect identity of our views as to our future relations, the absence of all conflict of interests in the East of Europe, and the feasibly of a preliminary understanding upon all political questions; and in this manner they have served to establish personal relations of real and mutual confidence. Presented thus in their true light, the meetings of the Sovereigns and their Ministers, far from affording any causes for suspicion, offer to all Europe a new guarantee of peace. Be pleased to accept on opportunity of removing erroneous impressions tending either to cast doubts upon our intentions, or to represent what has passed as of a nature to give umbrage to other Cabinets."

THE LATE EMPIRE.

Paris Correspondence of the Daily News.

The publicity given by the London Press to the civil list sales is beginning to bear golden fruits. The bidding on Oct. 25 was exceedingly spirited, owing to the presence of English sympathisers with the Chiselhurst exiles. The gem of the table linen was the "Bee Service." It had been ordered, it was reported, to serve at the coronation of the Emperor and Empress, which would have taken place in Notre Dame, the Pope officiating, had the Germans been beaten by the French. But I ascertained, on making inquiries, that it was woven with a view as well to the royal entertainments given in 1867. This table-linen was manufactured in the north of Ireland. It looked very bright as satin, and was delicious to the touch. The borders were filled in with laurel wreaths, Carlovingian crowns, Ns, and eagles; and bees, with wide-spread wings, were scattered over the ground. A lot of two tablecloths, eight yards in length, and three dozen napkins, were purchased at the high price of 705 francs by a young English gentleman, acting on the behalf of the Empress Dowager. I believe that the Empress's instructions to buy for him all the Bee sets that were going cheap. They obtained for him some of the banqueting table-cloths, but did not buy in any of the others. A lady of rank and fortune who was connected with the dispersed Court spent nearly 1,000 francs in the Bee service, which she intends to present to the Empress Eugenie, if the latter does not connect it

The Salaries of Judges.

The Salaries of Judges.—Feature of the Supervisors-Recorder Hacket asks in a Mandamus to Compel the Controller to Pay Him his Salary.

Mr. TERRY, of DEVLIN, MILLER & TERRY, yesterday appeared before Judge READY, in Supreme Court, Chambers, and moved for a mandamus against Controller CONNOLLY and Deputy Controller GREEN, to compel them to pay Recorder HACKETT three months salary, upto the 30th September, 1871, at the rate of $12,000 per annum.

Mr. STRAHAN appeared in opposition to the motion, and contended that, in 1853, the Legislature fixed the salary of the Recorder at $10,000, and both by that act and an act of the succeeding Legislature, it was specially provided that the Board of Supervisors should have no power to increase the salary. The Controller has at all times, he said, been ready to pay at the rate of $10,000 a year, but holds that the resolution of the Board of Supervisors, giving the extra $2,000, is illegal.

In reply to this, it was contended on behalf of the Recorder that the acts of 1852 and 1853, giving the Board of Supervisors power to increase certain salaries, among them that of the Recorder, was not repealed by the acts of 1857, 1859 and 1860, forbidding the exercise of the power to increase; that the authority thus conferred on the Board of Supervisors was continued under the charter, and was not intended to be limited or recalled by the subsequent acts of the Legislature, referred to on the part of the Controller.

The discussion was closed by Mr. STRAHAN, who contended that even though the provisions of the acts of '52 and '53 did not recall the power conferred on the Board of Supervisors by previous acts, that power had been effectually limited by the express repeal of the provisions increasing the salaries of the Judges, including the Recorder.

Judge READY said he was of opinion that the act of 1857 had more reference to that subject than the acts of '52 and '53, which had been referred to. He would, however, take the case de novo and briefs if counsel and examine the question.

A Lunatic Destroyed in Ludlow-Street Jail.

An application was made before Judge READY, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, on behalf of WM. HOFFMAN, for his discharge from Ludlow-street Jail. HOFFMAN is incarcerated under orders of arrest in some thirteen suits on the ground of incurring debts fraudulently. Some time since he was declared by a commission of examinators, appointed by the Court, to be a lunatic, and his wife was appointed by the Court as Committee of his person. HOFFMAN, it appears, still continued in Ludlow-street Jail. Judge READY reserved his decision.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

No. 190.—Smith vs. Shelley.—Error to the Circuit Court for Nebraska.—This was an action of ejectment, brought by Smith, to recover possession of a lot of land in Omaha. The case turned upon the point whether a deed to him from one Mitchell was valid. Mitchell having purchased at a sheriff's sale against property deed to the Nemaha Valley Bank. The Court below sustained the deed to the bank, which defeated the title of the plaintiff. It is here insisted that the deed to the bank was void, because there was no such corporation, the Territorial Legislature not having authority to incorporate banks. The action was commenced in Congress, which had not been done. On the other hand, it is maintained that the charter of a corporation cannot be declared void in a collateral suit, but can only be so declared by a proceeding instituted directly against it on behalf of the State. Reversed with costs. Argued by Mr. Wentworth for plaintiff in error, Reddick & Briggs for defendant.

No. 192.—Smith vs. Mason, Assignee, &c.—Appeal from the Supreme Court, D. C.—This suit was brought by the assignee against the partners of a bankrupt, for an account. The fund was in the District, in the hands of the attorney of the bankrupts. A Bankruptcy Court was asked to enjoin payment to the non-accounting partners or to the plaintiff in error, who had set up a claim, and who had been cited to assert it. At this point the surviving partners intervened, and set up their rights. The Bankruptcy Court, having acquired such jurisdiction over the subject-matter and the parties, decided that the debt originally due to the assignors of the plaintiff in error had been paid, (none of these parties being present or having notice,) and that the fund in the hands of the attorney of the firm should be paid over to the assignee of the assignors of the indebtedness. Smith appealed from the Bankruptcy Court to the Court in bane, where the injunction against payment to the surviving partners was dissolved, and an order was made that the money be paid over to them, and without notice to Smith's assignors. It is here urged that the Bankruptcy Court in bankruptcy had no jurisdiction to adjudicate the right, under the circumstances, and that the Court in bane erred in making a decree in the case. It had appellate jurisdiction only, and should have remanded the case to the Bankruptcy Court for further proceedings. Moore & Bright for appellant, G. W. Paschal for appellees.

No. 191.—Hanauer vs. Doane.—Appeal from the Circuit Court for Arkansas.—This was a suit on certain promissory notes, and the defence was that the notes were given without consideration, as they were given for supplies to the rebel army, which were sold to Hanauer as the agent of the Confederate States. The Court charged that if the goods were sold in the common and ordinary course of trade, and the only inducement to the sale of the goods on the part of the firm making the sale was the price agreed to be paid by Hanauer, then the sale was legal and valid, although the firm knew that Hanauer expected to carry the goods over to the rebel army. Under this charge the jury found for the plaintiff, and Hanauer brings the case here, contending that the instruction of the Court was error, and that the Court erred in refusing to instruct that if the firm selling the goods knew at the time of the sale that Hanauer was purchasing supplies for the rebel army to carry on the war against the United States, then the verdict should be for the defendant.

Watkins & Rose for plaintiff in error, A. H. Garland for defendant.

No. 193.—Holmes and Wife vs. Sevier, Administrator, &c.—Appeal from the Circuit Court for the District of Arkansas.—This and No. 282, Osborn vs. Nicholson et al.—Error to the Circuit Court for the District of Arkansas.—The question presented in these cases is upon the validity of notes given for slaves before emancipation, and is the same as argued in White vs. Hart, last Spring. The Court below held such notes to be, in the language of both the new Constitution of Arkansas and the amendments to the Constitution of the United States, "illegal and void," and the judgments were accordingly. It is here contended that such contracts made prior to emancipation are not affected by that event, nor can the obligation of such contracts be impaired by subsequent enactments, be they constitutional or otherwise.

The oral argument in support of the contracts is made in this Court by Mr. Phillips, and arguments are submitted by Messrs. Garland & Clarke. The argument against their validity is sub-mitted by Watkins & Rose.

No. 201.—Parker vs. Lyles.—Error to the Circuit Court for Nebraska.—This action was ejectment, and the questions are of fact. The plaintiff in error does not appear here, and the defendant in error stating that the subject matter in controversy being less than $500, insists that the case should be dismissed.

Reddick & Briggs for defendant.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM—NOV. 9.

Before Presiding Justice Ingraham, and Judge Cardozo.

THE SUIT OF CAPT. SAMUELS AGAINST THE EVENING POST.

Samuel Samuels vs. William C. Bryant and Isaac Henderson.—This was an action brought by plaintiff against the defendants, publishers of the Evening Post, for having published a libelous article against him, in stating that there were probabilities that he had committed suicide, and that such act was in consequence of the defeat of the yacht Dauntless. The defendants put in no answer, except by alleging matter in mitigation, that they had been imposed upon, and that they contradicted the report as soon as practicable. The case went before a Sheriff's jury, who awarded plaintiff $5,000. Defendants moved for an order opening the default, which was granted by Judge BARNARD, and from this an appeal was taken. Reversed by default.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Blatchford.

United States vs. Eli E. May and Gustave J. May.—The defendants were held for trial last August on a charge of smuggling into this port jewels and precious stones to the amount of $6,222, and a suit was commenced yesterday to enforce their forfeiture. The prosecution seeks to support its claim on the fact that thirteen or fourteen pockets containing the jewels were found on the inside skirt worn by one of the defendants. The defendants contend that the articles were brought regularly on the country and that they were willing to pay any duty imposed upon them. The case is still on.

THURSDAY, Nov. 9—P. M.

The sales of Gold today were 100¾ ₱ cent. lower than yesterday. The range of business was 111¾@111¾ ₱ cent. The Cash Gold was easy before the Treasury sale of $2,000,000 at noon, since when 5@6 ₱ cent. Interest was paid to carry over balances. The gross amount of Treasury Gold bid for was $8,275,000.

Foreign Exchange showed weakness early in the day, and the 60 days rate on London for first-class Bills unsettled between 108¾@108¾ ₱ cent. Later in the day there was a good demand, and the market left off steadier, 108¾@108¾ ₱ cent. There is a considerable variety of Bills offering, and although the Bank of England still holds on to 5 ₱ cent. loans, interest, private letters and telegrams quote the Street rates full one ₱ cent. lower on good 60 day Bills, and not over 3@3½ ₱ cent. on demand loans.

In our own market the rates for Money are gradually tending to ease, although lenders are not disposed to place their balances beyond call until it is seen whether more Currency will be needed between this and the New-Year, in the South and West, to move the Cotton and Provision crops. At present the Western Cities are fully supplied, and Exchanges in favor of New-York, so that Currency is coming this way. At the South there is a better supply of National Circulation, under the Act of July, 1870, than last season, and the prospect is that Greenbacks will not be required from New-York at the Cotton ports to any perceptible extent. The Banks are discounting for their regular dealers with fair liberality, and the amount of Merchants' paper offering on the Street at extra rates of discount is much smaller than a fortnight or three weeks ago. On demand loan the Brokers paid today 3@7 ₱ cent., with a few exceptions at 5 ₱ cent.

With the exception of the Public Funds, which hold firm, the Stock Exchange was less buoyant than yesterday. There was some disposition to realize on the advance in the New-York and Western Roads; but, after all, the yielding in prices was not very marked to the close of the Second Board, the chief difference from Wednesday being in the amount of business at the Boards and in the Hall of the Exchange. The advance of 2 ₱ cent. in Erie since Monday night is fairly supported, and rumor connects it with the substitution of Mr. DANIEL DREW in the management for Mr. WILLIAM M. TWEED, who has other and more pressing engagements to attend to. The dealings in Western Telegraph are large at advancing prices. The South Carolina Bonds continue weak, under a daily pressure to sell. The last transactions were at 35 ₱ cent. for the January and July issues.

After the late Boards the following quotations were made as compared with Wednesday night:

The New-York Times.

DAILY, WEEKLY AND SEMI-WEEKLY.

This journal is now thoroughly identified with the greatest political necessity of the hour—uncompromising warfare against all forms of corruption, whether in national or local government. For years past the TIMES has been exposing the demoralizing schemes of self-interested politicians, and its recent warfare upon the Tammany Democrats has been received with universal approval. It has adhered to the pledge given in its original prospectus, more than twenty years ago, that the public should be truly represented, and their interests faithfully guarded through its columns. Its record has been pure and honorable, and the highest aim of its proprietors is to render it more and more worthy of its past history, and of the confidence which the public repose in it. Two out of three of the original proprietors still direct its policy, and guide it on all public questions. They purpose that the TIMES shall continue to keep clear of all narrow and unworthy influences and aliases, and aim to represent the great body of the public, as distinguished from personal factions. It occupies a perfectly independent position, and is free to speak the truth on all subjects and about all men. Its greatly increased circulation throughout the country adds to its power and influence. It will continue to be a faithful exponent of Republican principles, and advocate with untiring energy every cause which tends to further the welfare of the people.

The utmost care will be devoted to gathering political news from special sources during the Presidential canvass. This department of the paper will be unusually full and trustworthy. Renewed enterprise will be exhibited in every department of the paper, and large space will be devoted to reports of speeches made during elections, or on other important political occasions.

A very full summary of news, and many general articles of great interest, are published in the daily and weekly editions; and in the Weekly edition there is an unabridged report of the proceedings at the Farmers' Club, an excellent summary of political information, and a great variety of matter suitable for family reading.

The NEW-YORK TIMES is pre-eminently a family paper, all objectionable advertisements being rigidly excluded; and it has a constantly increasing circulation among the most respectable classes of the community.

What Republicans Have To Learn.

To use a victory wisely is sometimes as difficult as to win one, and we hope that all earnest friends of reform will take care not to throw away their present opportunities, either by lack of judgment or excess of confidence. We must go on as we have begun, inviting the aid of honest men, irrespective of party, and taking care that the Government of this City is not made a bone for hack politicians to fight over. Whatever differences our fellow-citizens may have in regard to national politics, they ought to treat City affairs as occupying a kind of neutral ground. A man may wish to see the Democracy in power, and yet be a most desirable person to call in for consultation when any question of City management is concerned. So that we secure an upright Government, we ought not even to ask to which party the men belong who carry it on. Of course it will be a very difficult work to construct such a Government, but plenty of acute minds will be devoted to the task between this and next January, and we shall be sure to succeed in the end. We have already received innumerable proposals for a new City charter. But in such an undertaking as this the old proverb is true—"more haste the less speed." The professional politicians, of course, offer to take the job on contract. They are very anxious to relieve the people of all trouble in the matter. But the fact is that professional politicians are at a discount. It is often said that if the horse knew his own power, the man would not drive him very far. Well, the people have found out their power, and defend upon it they will not be so slow to use it in the future as they have been in the past. They will exercise a thorough check upon the "political" jobs concocted in bar-rooms and at hole-and-corner meetings. The insignificant schemers and wire-pullers who think they won the election on Tuesday, and propose to "run" the next Legislature, will be sent spinning before they have had time to show much more of their cleverness.

There is another set of men for whom a very bad time indeed is in store, as we warned them long ago. They would not believe us then—perhaps they will condescend to pay a little attention now. We refer to those despicable scamps, the professional bribers, who make annual pilgrimages to Albany for the purpose of acting as agents between the Orange S. Winnanses and the Tweeds or Fiskes of politics. The chief of this dirty gang is A. D. BARNUM, commonly called the "King of the Lobby." TWEED has doubtless already "seen" him, and set him to work to find out the price of the newly-elected members of the Legislature. Wherever this man, BARNUM, is seen next year at Albany, we will have a man on his traces, and we hope to bring the rascal to justice by hook or by crook, no matter how much time it may require to do it. We will do our part toward making this a very unpleasant and unprofitable Winter for BARNUM and all his underlings. He is at the head of the vilest trade to which any human being ever put his hand. It is bad enough to take a bribe—but to go about the world making it a business to offer bribes, to live upon that business, and to be ready to sacrifice country and principle to the disgusting work, is to sink to the lowest depths of baseness. This fellow, BARNUM, must be made to understand that his infamous calling can no longer be practiced with impunity. The Democrats have elected very bad men to the Legislature. But we can manage them. The notoriously corrupt Republicans can also be prevented from doing further mischief, thanks to the majority we have secured. There is no fear of the scale being turned against us by a scoundrel like WINANS "selling out." The Legislature will not fail to understand the warning which the people have now delivered to all the tools of corrupt factions. As for TOM FIELDS, who has cheated GOV. SEYMOUR out of his election, the majority is large enough to see justice done. It is quite certain that the sting of all such rascals is drawn, and that there will be no serious impediment to accomplishing the end which the people have had in view—the establishment of a good and sound Government on principles which will be satisfactory to the honest men of all parties.

The Work Yet to be Done.

Tammany found its Sedan on Tuesday; we must have a counterpart to the capitulation of Paris before the war can be considered at an end. The Committee of Seventy meets to-night, and we hope that no thought of disbanding, just yet, will enter into its counsels. Much work remains to be done before the emancipation of the City can be considered complete, and the work is of a kind that demands the co-operation of the body of representative citizens who have already done so much for New-York. First comes the necessity for a prompt and thorough prosecution of the men who were concerned in the numerous frauds upon the ballot-boxes perpetrated on Tuesday. This work should not be entirely left to the contesting candidates and friendly political organizations. These frauds are an outrage and an insult to every voter, and their punishment ought to be seen to by the elected guardians of the people's rights.

Again, there are the prosecutions against TWEED and his confederates. Mr. O'CONOR and his associates can, of course, be trusted to conduct these with vigor and decision, but there is an enormous mass of evidence implicating other members of the Ring, which can be more readily got at now than at any time previous, and this the people look to the Committee to sift and render available for use in a Court of justice. It will hardly serve to improve the future morality of our public servants, if PETER B. SWEENY is to be allowed to sneak out of his official responsibilities, carrying with him in safety some six or seven millions earned in the course of five years, during which he had no visible occupation save that of plundering the public. Nor would it be a very edifying spectacle if Mayor HALL should be permitted to adopt the suggestion of the Evening Post and quietly take himself off to Europe, without accounting for that criminal participation in glaring fraud which so good a Democrat as SAMUEL J. TILDEN has brought home to him. If men can steal and betray public trust in every possible form, and find that no worse penalty awaits being found out than a deprivation of office, we shall find the line of public plunderers as endless as that of Banquo's offspring. A wealthy corporation which declines to prosecute a defaulting clerk, is not generally held to have advanced the standard of business morality. A much graver condemnation would be deserved by the community that allowed men to go scot-free who had not only stolen out of the rich man's abundance, but had also laid violent hands upon the hard-won earnings of the poor.

It should further be remembered that though most people believe that TWEED and HALL must resign, they have as yet shown no disposition to do so. Every Department of the City Government remains pretty much as it did before the election, and if the pressure of public condemnation is one whit relaxed, they will continue so till the end of the year at least. That we have an honest and incorruptible public servant in the Controller's office cannot be too often recalled to mind. Financially speaking, we have tided over a most unexampled crisis simply in virtue of that fact, and now that the people has indorsed the cause which he represents, money is being offered more than sufficient in amount to meet all the current obligations of the City. But, so long as the Departments are in dishonest hands, Mr. GREEN can only partially check the leakage of public money. It is impossible for him to know, for instance, whether men on the pay-rolls of TWEED's Department actually perform the work with which they are credited. Certificates in legal form may cover a good many frauds, which no amount of vigilance in the Controller's office can detect. Every day that the rump of the Tammany administration remains in power undoubtedly costs the tax-payers several thousands of dollars, which are either stolen or wasted. Unless Albert energy on the part of the Reformers can alone terminate a state of things so shameless. Nor, if there be any foundation for the latest rumor of TWEED's meditating a departure for Europe, is there the less cause for continued vigilance on the part of the Committee of Seventy and of the people. A man who has stolen millions must not be allowed to get off by forfeiting bail for one million, and altogether escaping punishment. Justice and self-preservation alike demand that we shall finish thoroughly the work which has been, so far, so well done.

The Brooklyn Election Frauds.

It is quite time that the Ring which exists in Brooklyn should be broken up. It came into existence about the same time as the famous combination in New-York, and it has been just as bad, in a somewhat different way, ever since. It strikingly resembles the Tammany Ring in many particulars. It is made up mainly of Democratic politicians, but it has the help of several influential Republican office-holders. It controls the entire administration of the city and county. It is corrupt and wasteful, and despises the law. It has long been supported by Democrats out of sincere partisanship, and they are becoming sick of it. Finally, it has repeatedly made use of the same machinery for securing fraudulent elections that Tammany has employed. It is needless to add that, at Albany and at home, in political and in social relations, the intimacy between its leaders and those of Tammany has been of the closest kind.

The rock on which this Ring bids fair to go to ruin is the recklessness of its members in perpetrating and conniving at election frauds. Two years since, this was shown in a way that came near costing it its life, and would have done so had "SAM" MORRIS, the District-Attorney of the county, been as clean-handed as he was courageous. The most open and shameful frauds were then proven. Inspectors made false returns in a manner so bungling, and with such palpable direction from the powers that were, that when MORRIS hauled a score of the offenders before the Court, then presided over by an impartial Judge, the Ring knew that its existence was in peril. Astute counsel was employed in the person of WINCHESTER BRITTON, the present Democratic District-Attorney elect, to pettifog the case until "pressure" could be brought to bear on MORRIS to compel him to abandon the prosecutions. With the aid of the State officials this was accomplished, and the Ring took a new lease of power. That lease it has used with the utmost energy and ingenuity up to the present hour. Its tactics have not been so bold, but they have been quite as evil as those of Tammany. It has operated not so much in jobs that swell the general taxes—in these it has actually economized—but in jobs that were either paid for by special assessments or were sustained by the issue of bonds. Of the former, the pavement of Atlantic-avenue and Fulton-avenue, and numerous smaller "improvements," are specimens; of the latter the New-York Bridge and the storage reservoir are samples. It is impossible to say how much the Ring has stolen in these directions. Two things are certain—that the bonded debt of the city has been stated at the enormous figure of thirty-five million dollars, and this statement has had no authoritative denial, and that all efforts to procure the publication of the accounts and pay-roll of the City Government, including the Water Board, have failed. At the last election these facts told heavily against the Ring ticket. It is conceded that the majority on the State ticket has been cut down one-third since last year; that one Senatorial district has been reclaimed; that four of nine Assemblymen have been carried this year, where last year there was but one, and in 1869 none; and that the Republican candidate for City Controller has been elected. In the midst of the revulsion of feeling against the Democracy which produced these results, the Ring's supremacy was threatened. It is evident that an effort has been made to save it by fraud. This is plainly charged by the candidates who have suffered by it. It is conceded by the local Democratic paper that "repeaters were at work." The World admits the force of the proofs of fraud adduced. It is not easy to deny it. In four heavy Democratic Wards, which have been thickly populated for years, and where the population has rather been driven out by factories than found room to increase, the Democratic vote has risen by from fifty to sixty per cent., while the Republican vote remains unchanged. In one district of the Fourteenth Ward—a heavy Democratic Ward—the returns were not made till 9 o'clock the morning after the election, and then it was found that the Democratic candidate for Assembly had received 130 votes more than the State ticket, and the same number more than his rival, who was returned defeated by a score or so of votes. In one district of the Sixth Ward, where less than 900 votes were cast in 1870, 1,300 votes are recorded, which, besides being an increase of over fifty per cent., is a number that must have required the polling of two votes a minute the day through, whereas, in point of fact, there was a very light vote cast.

On this and similar evidence which we cannot now notice, a meeting has been called at the Academy of Music to-night to take measures to bring the frauds that have been committed to light, to remedy the wrong inflicted on the constituents of the candidates counted out, and to bring to justice the perpetrators of the frauds. The meeting will be presided over by Mayor KALBFLEISCH, and be addressed by Democrats as well as Republicans. We bespeak for it a full attendance. It is a shame that just as the New-York Ring is broken at the polls the citizens of Brooklyn should be made the victims of such wicked frauds. Let the meeting to be held to-night be the beginning of the end for the Ring. The same energy, unity of purpose and disinterested devotion exist among good men of both parties on one side of the East River as on the other. Let them be brought into action in the same way and the result will be the same.

Purple and Fine Linen.

The Queen of Belgium has been sued for a dress-maker's bill, and fashionable Europe, or such of it as the desolation of Paris has left, is greatly exercised by the scandal. The account on which the action has been brought is for 97,000 francs, and the Queen refuses to pay because she says it is exorbitant. Like her sister milliner of Boston, who lately set the example, the Brussels modiste insists that her charges are absurdly moderate, and proposes to establish the fact in a Court of law. The occasion has been used by some sensible writers in Europe to to discuss the subject of the preposterous extravagances of female dress, and to suggest that a fitting time has arrived to agitate vigorously for reform.

Is not the time as favorable for the same suggestion among ourselves? Reform is the watchword of the hour, and its successful application to political abuses may judiciously prompt the effort to apply it to social ones. We of this community all know, what with heavy taxes and the high price of rents and food, how very hard it has been for people of moderate means to make both ends meet. It will scarcely be denied that the average cost of female dress among us since the close of the war has been unreasonably great. Nor is this the whole of the evil. The tendency has been to copy in feminine attire unfortunate models. French fashions of a certain type have been most in vogue. Now there is no doubt that French cut and adornment are, in general, more elegant and stylish than others. As between average French and English dress-making there is notoriously no comparison. But it is not this that is objected to. The evil lies in copying, consciously or unconsciously, the fashions of the demi-monde, or, to use the words of an earnest contemporary, in the constant attempt "to match the dress of domestic life against that which is avowedly contrived to advertise and to allure." It is not well that there should thus be room for doubt on matters so delicate, or that modern civilization should be so much less scrupulous than ancient civilization in what so nearly touches the purity and decorum of society.

But if this special objection were removed, that which refers to mere expenditure is grave, and tends to become more so. No woman likes to be worse dressed than her friends and neighbors, and no man likes to see his wife subjected to such a mortification. Thus it happens that every lady who unfortunately dresses beyond her means, injures not only herself, but probably many others. Thus also it frequently happens that men are blamed for overworking themselves, for rushing into stock speculations, for being discontented with moderate situations, and being feverishly anxious to better themselves, when in fact they are constantly running behindhand and feel the desperate necessity to look for means for extrication. Of course there are other things for which more money is spent than can be afforded besides female dress. The age runs to luxury, and this is only one form of it. It is, however, a form of serious magnitude, so serious as in some cases to have swamped handsome incomes and destroyed every hope of future competency. Out of evil comes good, as we all hope and sometimes see. But the lesson of ruined Paris—where erstwhile fashionable dames from faded finery passed to sackcloth, and those who had been used to the sumptuous fare of "Philips's," or the Frères Provençaux, struggled for crusts and fought for bitter apples—seems in this wise imperfectly learned. Therefore the movement started at Berlin by the Crown Princess of Prussia, and just taken up in London by the ladies of the Social Science Congress, is cheering and commendable.

This movement avowedly is to cultivate "plainness and modesty of dress, with good taste, befitting materials, but no extravagance nor meretricious display." Would it be too much to expect that ladies of social power in New-York would follow the example? No Quaker fashion is indicated here, no extreme of any sort, but merely that return to simple grace and rational cost from which existing modes have so widely strayed. There is hardly a point about present female attire, from the pillows of false hair on the head to the torturing high heels of the feet, that is not inartistic and objectionable for other reasons besides that of outlay. It is idle, we are well aware, to inveigh against fashion as fashion; but when fashion happens to be hideously unbecoming as well as unjustifiably extravagant and demonstrably unwholesome, we may hope, at least, that its reign will be ephemeral.

Our Police Force.

Probably no body of men of the same number in this City felt more sincerely rejoiced at the result of Tuesday's election than the Police force. The members of this force have been miserably humiliated during the last two months. They have been compelled by their superiors, including among the Commissioners two so-called Republicans who are a disgrace to the name, to do the dirty work of the Tammany candidates—to intimidate voters, to break up processions, to disturb meetings, and to withhold their protection from those exposed to the violence of the Tammany roughs. On Tuesday, the degradation of the force in many quarters was carried to its extreme limit, and policemen were engaged in taking the most unjustifiable liberties with the right of the people to vote peaceably and independently. They were found allowing the rowdies of Tammany to block the polls, to assault or threaten challengers, to interfere with voters, to practice frauds on the ballots before their very eyes. Doubtless they performed this contemptible part,—revolting as it must have been to every man who had the remotest knowledge of his duty as an officer,—at the bidding of those whom they are accustomed to obey. "HANK" SMITH and "BEN" MANIERRE—both calling themselves "Republicans"—heartily obeyed the bidding of their Tammany masters. We hope they will be made to smart for it when the Legislature meets. They staked their all on the success of Tammany; let them abide by the result. It is impossible that the public can be well served until the Police force is taken out of the domain of politics altogether. We do not want it a "Republican" or a "Democratic" body of men—but a Police force, with but one master, the public. The men will then do their duty with a good heart, and will not be at the beck and call of every rascally politician.

It will be among the most important duties of the Reform Legislature to carry out these reforms. We have been taught by melancholy experience the dangers to which the present system exposes us. The Police force under the really non-partisan Board of Commissioners and the discipline of Superintendent KNAPP, had become so strong in its good qualities, that it was slow work demoralizing it. But the demoralization had progressed far, and was going on at an alarmingly rapid rate, when the people laid hands on the whole corrupt system of which it is the result. It will be the work of the next Legislature to reorganize the force, and provide for its appointment and government in a way to protect the people from a repetition of the experience it has just gone through. The work is not less delicate than it is momentous. It will require patience, sagacity and courage. Interference with the Police on the part of Republican politicians is likely to prove as dangerous in the long run, and is in principle as unjustifiable as that practiced by Democrats, and it must be as rigidly guarded against. What the people want is an efficient machinery which shall perform its work with regularity and certainty, no matter what political influences may be brought into play to divert or weaken it. To such machinery the people are entitled, and they will expect to obtain it before the close of the next session of the Legislature.

Montreal's "Consecrated Fain-Killer."

A new religious quack has turned up in Canada. The local papers say he is a Father of the Trappist Order of St. Bernard. Not long ago he came over from France, with "many hundred gallons" of mysterious fluid, the ingredients of which are kept a dead secret. The stuff may be spoiled claret or sugared water to the common world, but to the faithful whom the worthy Father succeeds in gulling, it is a consecrated elixir of wondrous efficacy. His manner of introducing it to public notice is odd and worth describing. The first trials seem to have been made at the French Canadian settlements on the St. Lawrence. The Rivière du Loup has been profitably canvassed, as well as Sorel and Three Rivers. During the usual services in the Roman Catholic churches, the Trappist, we are assured, holds forth in glowing terms on the qualities of his elixir. It was "revealed" to him when a missionary among a semi-barbaric tribe in the Old World. He got the necessary constituents in Paris. It has now been "consecrated," which, in this sense, appears to operate like taking out a patent, and is capable of curing every ill that flesh is heir to. No language, however roseate or hyperbolical, could more than do it justice. In a word, its effect is simply miraculous. Yet, notwithstanding its inestimable preciousness, the fluid could be had after service for four shillings a bottle, and no money returned. Few will be surprised to hear that this impudent enterprise is entirely successful. Hundreds, it is said, in one congregation bought the stuff, the excellent Trappist informing his customers that the proceeds were to go toward rebuilding the decayed monastery of the Order of which he is a member.

We are further informed that the bottles have a figure of the Virgin Mary blown, apparently as a trade mark, on the glass, and that the contents resemble certain well-advertised "pain-killers" in look and odor. To employ the pulpit as a place from which to advertise nostrums is certainly an original idea, and, if it is to be continued, we might soon expect to hear of the cure-all pills or somebody's pain-killer extolled in choice rhetoric from the same sacred platform. Yet, although the absurdity of the affair may cause a smile, it is no pleasant thing to be told that the people of the St. Lawrence are ignorant enough to stand such outrageous imposition, or that the superior ecclesiastics of the diocese will allow the experiment. Such a prostitution of the Church, and such playing on the superstition of the ignorant and lowly, is a disgrace to our age and to the American continent. It appears that the Trappist Father, after doing a splendid stroke of business in the rural districts, betook himself to the wider field of Montreal. Here, however, we are glad to say, he does not seem to have been allowed to use the churches for his knavish purpose, and we can well believe that intelligent Roman Catholics would wish to discountenance him everywhere. Nevertheless, the "consecrated pain-killer" is reported to be on sale in Montreal, and to find many purchasers; and a French newspaper there publishes an elaborate laudation of its amazing qualities, and of the saint-like merits of the archchar latan, its vender.

The New Blasbeals.

A London paper, usually distinguished for the temperateness of its statements on practical subjects, has made an astounding discovery. The strange drug, which has been reported of late to be a kind of universal panacea, which cures corns and headaches, rheumatism and sea-sickness, is likewise found, as the Indian says, "to make drunk come." It ministers not only to the body but to the mind diseased, and so potent has been found its spell that the Spectator gravely assures its readers that there are now more than two hundred thousand "chloral drunkards" in the community wherein it is published. We have not yet heard of the number of such inebriates among ourselves, but we may yet hear in fashionable saloons of choral "smashes" and "cocktails," and, as the stuff is credited with the alluring character of being "a stimulant without a reaction," its popularity will become unbounded.

Unfortunately for the chlorine disciples of the future, its prophet has made some queer blunders. To make out his case he thought it expedient to declare that a single London chemist sells two tons of the drug a month. Now, an expert has made a calculation founded on the following data: the maximum dose of chloral is sixty grains—one hundred, it is said, would kill a prize-fighter—two tons a month, by simple reduction, comes to something over a million grains a day, and to sell a "maximum dose" in each case, seventeen thousand customers must go to the shop daily to buy. The absurdity of this is manifest, and it throws a fabulous air over the whole story. Chloral is doubtless useful in materia medica, and will probably be more so when better known; but that it is likely to rival the drug to which DE QUINCY and COLERIDGE owed their madness is not probable. One reason for this is that its use is so hazardous. Some constitutions are extremely susceptible to it, and while for convenience, sixty grains is called a maximum dose, people are said to have died under thirty. The limited number of deaths from chloral in the present advanced condition of post-mortem test is clearly another weighty argument against the Spectator's hypothesis. Still another important objection lies in the "cumulative" nature of the drug. One small dose may not poison, but a succession of small doses may; and no one can tell, save by trying, which of the two, if either, is to happen. Under these discouraging circumstances, it is not to be wondered at if those who crave artificial exhilaration should confine themselves to the safer if more vulgar alcoholic stimulants—to the seductive products of Indian hemp or the poppy, or, in a word, should limit themselves to the ills they have rather than fly to others that they know not of. There are plenty of people in the world willing to poison themselves, no doubt, but most of them have a fancy for taking their own time about it, and not having the catastrophe come in the way of a surprise.

Reformers at the Right Kind of Work.

The action of the Apollo Hall Democratic Reform Association, in appointing a committee to investigate and punish the frauds committed at the recent election, bids fair to prove of the utmost importance.

A subcommittee, consisting of the lawyers ABRAHAM R. LAWRENCE, Jr., and HENRY L. CLINTON, have been busily at work since the formation of the Committee in collecting facts and evidence, which pour in upon them from every side. They have already discovered a number of the most aggravated cases of election frauds, implicating not only inspectors and canvassers, but policemen; and they will, it is hoped, be able to trace the matter home to the leaders, in whose interest and by whose direction these frauds upon the right of suffrage were committed.

Every citizen having any information which will lead to the detection of any similar frauds is earnestly requested to assist in the punishment of men who have so long overridden the will of the people.

MINOR TOPICS.

Calamities fall thick and fast upon the heads of Tammany politicians. The notorious "JIM" IRVING, who was expelled from the last Legislature for a personal assault upon a fellow Democrat, and who ran as a Tammany candidate for two offices (Assemblyman and Alderman) on Tuesday last, and was defeated in both, was arrested yesterday for a felonious assault upon a United States Deputy Marshal while in the discharge of his official duty. The "here of a hundred disgraceful election rows," as he is described in the reports, discovered to his entombment that his Aldermanic dignity was of no avail as a protection against Uncle Sam's justice, and he had the mortification of seeing handcuffs placed upon his wrists, preparatory to being marched off to Ludlow-street Jail. The victim of his last brutality lies in a dangerous condition from his wounds, and there is a fair prospect that Alderman "JIM" IRVING may find his way to Sing Sing or to the gallows ahead of his Tammany masters.

What has become of NATHANIEL SANDS? We have heard nothing from him since that great financial achievement of his, in which he saved the City sixteen millions of dollars by selling fifteen millions worth of the bonds, and pocketing $75,000 for his trouble. We trust that so brilliant a genius as SANDS is not to be allowed to sink into obscurity, or to have his light hid under a bushel—at least not until he is made to disgorge that $75,000 of the people's money which he has in his pocket. If the venerable PETER COOPER, who was so "dumfounden" at SANDS' treachery, has recovered from his amazement, we trust he will take immediate steps to recover the money which the City has lost through the treachery of his friend. Mr. COOPER has indorsed SANDS' character before the public for the last two years, and doubtless feels himself in some degree responsible for the tricks of his model financier.

France is attacking the educational problem, and seems bent upon solving it thoroughly. Compulsory education has already been decreed in Paris, and the Provincial General Councils are showing a disposition to follow the example of the Department of the Seine. Frenchmen have succeeded in showing that they understand very clearly the causes of their demoralization. It is cheering to find that they are not deficient in the energy required to remedy them. But, as shown by the Minister of Public Instruction at the recent annual meeting of the five Academies of Paris, the social ills of France cannot all be reached by educating the masses. Here is his trenchant summary of them:

"We have replaced glory by gold, work by speculation, faith and honor by skepticism, party struggle by competition of interests, the school by the club, &c. To absolve or glorify immorality; to make much of loose women; to gratify ourselves with luxury, our ears with the noise of orgies; to aid in the manœuvres of public robbers or to applaud them; to laugh at morality, and only believe in success; to love nothing but pleasure, adore nothing but force; to replace work with a fecundity of ideas; to speak without thinking; to prefer noise to glory; to erect sneering into a system, and lying into an institution—is this the spectacle that we have seen?—is this the society that we have been?"

These things were fostered by a democratic Imperialism. We have seen something not unlike this picture under our Imperialist Democracy. Both systems were equally devoid of soul and conscience, and both have left enough of their poison in the society of Paris and in that of New-York to require years to eradicate.

The weight of evidence, including the Herald's statement to the contrary, is that TWEED has not resigned his position in the Department of Public Works, and does not intend to resign his seat in the Senate. Why should he? If he be the innocent man he protends, and if he is satisfied that the work of bribing and ballot-box stuffing is a verdict of the people, why should he not make all the hay he can in the few sunshiny days that are left him, and present himself at Albany as the fit representative of the "cash" of New-York? But there should be no suspicion that he will be allowed to act as a Senator at Albany. The Senate is the sole judge of the qualifications of its members, and there is no law which requires it to receive in its circle a proven thief, whose presence there would be a public scandal of the grossest kind. Doubtless there will be contrivances to prevent or not prevent a vacancy occurring any further. But we call all honest men's attention to the fact that TWEED is today as unrepresentative as ever, that he is "shorn," his property into the hands of his relations, and that his escape from State Prison would be only less humiliating to the decent part of New-York than would have been the success of the Tammany ticket at the polls.

It will be seen by our Washington dispatches that it is the intention of the Administration to warn the Apaches who have been particularly unruly, that they will be pursued for crimes as surely as they will be lodged if they behave themselves. At the same time the whites are to be notified that they too will be held to strict account. This is as it should be. Indeed, WHITMAN has already informed the Government that there are signs of preparation to repeat the Fort Grant massacre. If there can be a general intention of common sense and justice into the treatment of the Indian question in relation to the whites as well as the red men, the country will be the gainer in both lives and money, as well as in reputation.

It is possible to hate the BONAPARTES very thoroughly and yet extract a good deal of entertainment out of the sale of the toys of the Prince Imperial. It was the misfortune of this little man to be born to a destiny which was too big for him, and the desperate efforts of his instructors to cram artillery and fortification into his tiny head, through the medium of his toys, is calculated to excite general sympathy. There is a touch of nature, too, in his boyish preference for a Punch and Judy show, which recalls the desire of the sickly inheritor of many hopes—the young NAPOLEON II.—to be allowed to get out to help in making mud pies. The Emperor and Empress may hanker after their departed greatness, but to the unfortunate Prince Imperial it must be a genuine relief to be rid of those dreadful toy counterscarps, demi-lunes and fleurs-de-lis.

AMUSEMENTS.

Mr. and Mrs. FLORENCE take a joint benefit to-night at the Grand Opera-house. This will be an occasion of farewell, and several circumstances unite to make it interesting. Among these the fact that "Eileen Oge" is to be acted for the last time will be observed, and will doubtless stimulate a large attendance. The popularity of the benefactors, and the merits by which that popularity has been gained, are well known, and we trust that the fine engagement of the FLORENCES at the Grand Opera-house will wind up to-night with all deserved prosperity.

Musical.

ORATORIO PERFORMANCES.

The New-York Harmonic Society is now preparing for a recital of "The Messiah," to occur, with Mr. DOLBY'S orians as the soloists, at Steinway Hall. At the rehearsal on Monday, a vote of thanks was passed to Dr. PECK, in acknowledgment of his exertions in behalf of the Society, and of his recent services, publicly rendered, in New-York and Brooklyn.

Barnum's Big Show.

Mr. BARNUM'S traveling Museum, menagerie and circus will open on Monday next, at the Empire Rink, for a short season. In addition to the Great Show, which met with such brilliant success in the Eastern and New-England States, Mr. BARNUM announces that he will open the International Zoological Garden, containing over 300 specimens of the animal kingdom, and also a polytechnic Institute. These combined and attractive features render necessary that the exhibition should remain open from 11 A. M. to 10 P. M., with hippodramatic performances afternoon and evening. Judging from the preparations for the season at the Rink there can be no hesitation in announcing that Mr. BARNUM will astonish his friends and the public by the manifold attractions prepared for them.

ANOTHER NEW CHURCH.

The First Reformed Church Consecration—Laying of the Corner-Stone—Eastern and Colonial Services.

Yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock a large assemblage of the members and adherents of the First Reformed Church in Brooklyn, of which Rev. Dr. KENDALL is pastor, assembled at the corner of Wyckoff-street and Powers-street to witness the ceremony of the laying of a corner-stone of a new church in connection with the old Reformed Dutch Church in Jeralemon-street. The building is 80 feet by 90 feet, and fronts on Wyckoff-street; it is 35 feet high to the cornice, and has a solid foundation of blue stone laid in cement, rising about 10 feet, forming a basement. It is constructed of brick with a slate roof. Among the prominent laymen present were noticed Dr. Mason, M. D., Gen. Oscar Sedwick, C. Fowler, Geo. R. Dutcherhoff, James Smith, Adam Gray, Henry M. Curtis and A. J. Bookman, who assisted in the ceremony. The excellent choir of the church sang some chaste hymns and anthems. Dr. KENDALL delivered a very short address before and after the laying of the stone, by himself and Dr. MASON, and then Mr. A. J. BOOKMAN read a document dated 1660, being a protocol from Gov. STUYVESANT, granting permission to build the first church in Brooklyn.

The following documents were deposited in the box, which was laid in the aforesaid stone: A paper containing the name and objects of the building, the circumstances under which it is erected; copy of the protocol above alluded to; Constitution of the Reformed Dutch Church in America; names of ministers of the General Synod of 1871; names of pastors, elders, deacons of Reformed Church of Brooklyn; By-laws of the Consistory; names of the Building Committee and the builder; history of the Church; names of officers and teachers of the Sun school; names of officers, teachers and the by-laws of the Church school; Hymnology of the Church; the Bible; Book of Praise; Book of Psalms and Hymns; the religious newspapers and the daily press of New-York and Brooklyn; a Long Island bank note of 1853, and another of 1830; specimens of United States bills and fractional currency, and other little items of interest.

After the ceremony the Doxology was sung, and the benediction was pronounced by Dr. KENDALL.

A Card of Thanks from Gen. Sigel.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Allow me to express publicly my thanks to the gentlemen who acted as "watchers" at the canvass of my ticket on the evening and during the night of the election for their untiring energy at the polling places, and the promptness with which they sent in the election returns. Those of them who met with any difficulty or observed any violation of the laws and of the rights of voters, especially in regard to "repeating," or keeping, under any pretext, citizens from voting, I request to make a statement in writing and, unless such affidavits as they may be able to procure, so that further action can be taken. These statements to be sent to me at No. 69 West Forty-fourth-street.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Political Problems—Mr. Gladstone and his Constituents—The Premier's Personal Popularities—The Head of the Ministry—The Social Movement—Fairs and Working Men—The Copyright Question.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 28, 1871.

As I write, Mr. GLADSTONE is supposed to be addressing the electors of Greenwich, of which ancient and fishy borough he is member, on the heavy common known as Blackheath. As this is Saturday afternoon, and a half holiday, a great number of people have gone down from town to get a peep at the Premier, if not to hear him, and I have just heard that a vast multitude is assembled. It would be idle to speculate on what Mr. GLADSTONE is likely to say, and even if I were to get a report of his speech before the mail closes it would be very stale news before it reached New-York. I suppose you know the peculiar circumstances under which the Premier appears before his constituents. This is the first time they have ever had a chance of seeing him. At the General election three years since, he was rejected by South Lancashire, as just three years before that he had been rejected by the University of Oxford, which he had represented in Parliament for sixteen years. Greenwich elected him while he was busy scouring the fields Northern voters in "their drive at becoming enterprises," and before it was known he would be defeated there. It elected him, moreover, without troubling him to canvass or to make speeches, or indeed to show himself among them at all. He thanked his new constituents for this delicate attention, but only in a short, and not particularly cordial epistle, but never went near them. Greenwich, it must be confessed, is a low place, associated with traditions of a rapscallion fair, now suppressed,) with holiday gatherings of the working classes, who delight in playing "fine in the ring" and rolling about on the slopes of the park, and with fish dinners. There was a touch of the ludicrous in a great statesman being tumbled unconsciously out of two constituencies, and falling at last into the humble lap of plebian Greenwich. That after all, Greenwich rendered a service which deserved a generous recognition, and in the course of three years, Mr. GLADSTONE, even amid the endless cares of state, might surely have found time to spend an afternoon among his good friends, who were only half an hour's journey from his own house. Apart from this neglect he struck a blow at their prosperity in abruptly and summarily shutting up the Rose-yards at Deptford and Greenwich. He even persuaded the Cabinet to abandon the white-bait dinners with which it was customary for the Ministers to wind up the session, and which was always held at one of the chief hotels at Greenwich.

GLADSTONE'S IGNORANCE OF HUMAN NATURE.

There may seem small details, but they are important as an illustration of GLADSTONE'S personal peculiarities. That never, I suppose, was a man so strangely ignorant of human nature; yet, as some one said the other day, he must surely have read that there is such a thing. All his errors and failures as a statesman may be traced to this. Unquestionably there is an enmity in his great political conceptions which his colleagues, or as could not quicken and stir the masses as he does. But of individual humanity, of the every-day human nature of every-day people, the sort of human nature which has to be studied and conciliated and taken into account in the management of men, especially of those with whom one is brought into personal contact, he has apparently no idea whatever. PALMERSTON—the reverse of GLADSTONE in most things—was his opposite particularly in this. No one understood or managed men better than PALMERSTON. His influence was, as it were, from the core outwards—it ordinated with all the people who were round about him, his colleagues in the Government, officials in the public departments, members of Parliament, who liked and trusted him, and it was communicated through them to the mass of the people beyond. GLADSTONE'S influence, on the other hand, begins on the outside. It is at its strongest among the far-away public, who know him only by his speeches in the newspapers, and it gradually declines and grows weaker and weaker in the circles which are brought into personal contact with him, and pretty much in proportion to the closeness of the contact, till in fact, instead of attraction it becomes repulsion. The more people see of him the nearer and closer they see him, the less they like him. And this is mainly owing to an incongruous and disregard of human nature, in the thousand and one petty occurrences on which he sees trampling over people's corns, doing or not doing some little thing, and reaping and ruining everybody within reach of him. People at a distance, the great "general public," often wonder why GLADSTONE is so unpopular with public men, and why he finds Parliament so restive and unruly, and GLADSTONE wonders himself quite as much as anybody else. The other day he discovered that it was all due to the London clubs and the London newspapers, which represented vested interests that had been disturbed, and all sorts of private grievances and overtures. But these forces are equally at work in the case of other statesmen, and GLADSTONE'S peculiarity is that instead of soothing, conciliating or circumventing personal opposition, he exasperates and expands it. The defect is obviously in his own temper and cast of mind. PALMERSTON'S Government was a very strong Government, for it led GLADSTONE to work up principles, while PALMERSTON took heaps subject in hand. This latter branch of business is neglected or ignored by the present Government, which is consequently weak on a dangerous side. If it were left to Lord GRANVILLE the defect might be supplied, but GRANVILLE is only one of a number, and does not care to take too much upon himself.

THE LOSS OF THE MEGARA.

Unfortunately, Mr. GLADSTONE, an ungenial man himself, is, for the most part, surrounded in the Government with men who are equally ungenial and equally ignorant of human nature, or free of contempt for it. LOWE'S clear, bright intellect helps to qualify the injurious effect of his disregard of personal feelings; but in the case of such a man as Mr. BAXTER, the impression produced is one of unmitigated irritation and disgust. He has more than LOWE'S hardness and harshness toward opponents, with neither LOWE'S knowledge nor intellectual capacity. Nothing could be more unfortunate than his speech at Arbroath. It was devoted to an indication of the naval policy of the Government, and was chiefly taken up with a glorification of their savings—a few hundreds here, a thousand or two there, old contracts revised and reduced, new contracts made at cheaper rates, superfluous clerks dismissed, and establishments reduced. No doubt these are all good things in their way. At any rate, England's naval establishments had got into a bad way, and needed much pruning and purging. But, after all, even the saving of many thousands is not everything to a great country. The important thing is, whether, in return for its expenditure, it gets a thoroughly efficient article—army or navy, as the case may be. For my own part, I believe that Lord DERBY is right in saying that whatever may be the condition of our army, we have the strongest and best equipped navy in the world. But that is the result of the efforts of various administrations, and would never have been brought about if the BAXTERS had had their way. Economy run to death is one of the most extravagant things in the world. What happened to the troop-ship Megara is a very good case in point. Only a few day since, Mr. BAXTER was very severe and bitter in his remarks on those who had complained of the Megara being sent to sea; and no sooner are the words uttered than the Captain's dispatches come to hand and prove that matters were really much worse even than was supposed. The Megara was an old ship, and had been reported to be in want of repairs. But the repairs were stamped, and when after her voyage from Plymouth to Cork with troops, her condition was complained of by the officers, Mr. BAXTER declared in the House of Commons that there was not a word of truth in these complaints, and was exceedingly rude to Mr. WALPOLE, (who had a [illegible] and to other members who asked questions on the subject. It now appears that the repairs had been stamped for the sake of economy; that the plates of the bottom of the ship were quite worn away, so that they would not bear patching, and that the ship and all on board would have inevitably been lost, if she had not been run on St. Paul's Island in mid-ocean. Of course, some of the subordinate Admiralty officials must have been to blame for this; but then it was their superiors who gave the cue for an excessive and morbid economy, which defeated its own ends.

THE SOCIAL MOVEMENT.

What is called the "New Social Movement" is still the subject of talk in this dull season. This week the Peers who were accused of having projected an alliance with the working men, and the working men themselves, have each published an explanation of their part in the transaction, which, if it does not clear up the whole mystery, enables us to see pretty plainly what happened. The Peers and other Conservative politicians who were concerned in the matter intimate that they merely pledged themselves to consider whether anything could be done for the benefit of the working classes, and reserved perfect freedom to adopt or reject any proposals that might be submitted to them. The working men, on the other hand, say that they were led to believe that the Peers and others made overtures to them, and that they assented to the seven propositions which the artisans drew up. The fact seems to be that Mr. SCOTT RUSSELL, the go-between, who, oddly enough, has not yet given any explanations on his own account, humbugged both sides—not, of course, treacherously, or with any malicious intention, but out of the best and purest motives, which, indeed, are often at the bottom of a great many mischievous transactions. He wanted to play the part of a little Providence, to reconcile the peerage and the proletariat; to make capital and labor lie down together in peace and brotherly love; and he thought the only way to overcome their natural antagonism was to blindfold both and marry them in the dark—once married, he hoped they would not renounce their nuptials. The working men, who deemed their own socialist propositions were just and wise, were quite ready to believe that the Peers accepted them; the Peers assumed that the working man must have something rational and practicable to propose or they would never have looked to them for help. So each side was deluded; the plot has exploded, and harm instead of good has been done. Mr. SCOTT RUSSELL was the designer and builder of that chimera, the huge Great Eastern steam-ship, which has ruined. I don't know how many sets of shareholders, and his new political alliance was only another night-mare. If honest, there was no need for secrecy; if dishonest, there was no hope of keeping the secret long enough to be effectual.

THE INTERNATIONAL.

The Times has caused some sensation this week by publishing an account of the origin and principles of the International Association. There is nothing new in it, but it is useful that the aims of the Association should be distinctly recognized. It is easy, however, to exaggerate its influence. In point of fact, the Association is little more than a group of small committees, and the force of these committees lies only in the circumstance that they are organized bodies, when, in the event of a tumult, would be able to act together, and would command a certain amount of sympathy and respect among the working classes, to whom their names might be known. This was the case in the recent rebellion of the Commune in Paris, where the International supplies a compact nucleus of administrative organization. The members of the International have been grossly exaggerated. In England it had a certain authority in consequence of the adherence of some of the leaders of the trades-unions, but these have since been frightened away by the atrocities of the Commune and by the discovery that MARX and the other foreign conspirators are only making tools of them, and meant to keep all the power in their own hands and for their own purposes. It is in Germany, especially in the Rhine provinces and South Germany, that the International is strongest, and one of its favorite projects—a secret project of—is the creation of a republic of the Rhine, in which enterprise they hope for the support of French Republicans. They calculate that France would rather see Alsace and Lorraine part of an independent republic than a province of Prussia. Talking of socialism, I must not forget to mention the adoption this week of a great socialist measure in its best and truest sense in the metropolis—I mean the passing of a decree in favor of compulsory education. As soon as the new schools have been built, all children of a certain age must be educated there or elsewhere, subject to a penalty on their parents if they neglect or defy the law.

THE COPYRIGHT QUESTION.

The international copyright question has turned up again, and has been the subject of a brisk correspondence in the Times during the last week or two. At first the discussion was embittered and obstructed by the use of some needlessly strong and offensive expressions on the part of irate English authors who considered that they had been defrauded of their rights. Mr. MACMILLAN, the publisher, with characteristic chivalry, took up his pen on behalf of his American brethren, and showed conclusively, to my thinking, that in the first place, to use hard language about "piracy" was not an effectual mode of persuasion, and in the next place, that the word was inappropriate and unjust. A pirate is one who invades rights of property which are recognized and protected by law. An American publisher who publishes an English book without paying the author is merely availing himself of what is in his country a legal right. Since then the controversy has been calmer, and there seems to be a general agreement that authors should be protected, and that it would be a good thing to have a copyright treaty for this purpose. Mr. APPLETON assents to this, but couples it with a condition of which he does not seem to see the logical weakness. Let English authors have a copyright in the States, he says, but only with American publishers; the book may be written anywhere, but it should be protected only if printed, bound and published in America by an American publisher. In other words, Mr. APPLETON favors free trade for authors, but wants protection for publishers. If there is to be protection, surely American writers are as much entitled to it as American book-sellers. One of the strongest arguments in favor of a copyright treaty is that it would tend to encourage native American literature and prevent the American markets being swamped with foreign trash, which is printed merely because it can be had for nothing, or next to nothing. The upper ranks of American publishers are not only just but generous in their dealings with English authors, and I could give many instances of this. But, of course, they must be governed by commercial considerations, and they have to keep in view that the English works they have paid for may be reprinted next door to them by people who have paid nothing. Considering the amount of capital which is now sunk in the American trade, and the distinguished liberality and enterprise with which, on the whole, it has been conducted, I think it would be very reasonable that the copyright treaty, which I hope will be concluded, should not come into operation immediately, but should be prospective—say to begin five or ten years hence. If American and English publishers were to compete freely with each other, literature would undoubtedly be benefited, and I do not think the Americans would be any losers. One result would be to bring down the price of books in this country to something like the American level. There is a sort of league between the publishers and the circulating libraries to keep up the price of books, in order that people should not buy them, but should read them out of a library. There is one difficulty in the way of a treaty which must not be overlooked, and that is the colonial part of the question. Will Canada and the Australian colonies consent to be bound by an English treaty?

A Man Killed by a Wall from a Scaffold—Another Seriously Injured.

Yesterday morning while two carpenters, CHAS. HOGAN and DANIEL WARD, were employed upon the scaffolding at the top of a new building at Ninth and Washington streets, Jersey City, the wood-work gave way, and both men fell to the ground a distance of forty feet. HOGAN struck the ground first and WARD fell upon him. HOGAN was killed almost instantaneously. WARD had his arm broken and his leg fractured below the knee. Both men were single.

THE BLUBBER HUNTERS.

Nearly all the men that man the large whaling fleets which annually depart from New-Bedford, New-London and Nantucket are procured in New-York, and are almost always poor waifs literally cast upon the world, hungry, homeless and friendless, and in consequence become the easy prey of the cormorants delegated by the owners of the whale-ships in New-England to provide their vessels with crews. In a dingy, dank and dark-looking apartment into which the light of the sun is never seen to enter, and where you are almost stifled by the nauseous vapor emitted from stale tobacco-smoke, moldy furs, damp woolens and other fetid and filthy processes, is located the "office" of the whale-ship agent, who is almost always a retired whaleman, and who is generally better calculated to impose upon the credulity of the homeless wanderers who apply to him to ship. There can hardly be another place in the world where the freaks of fortune can be so thoroughly studied as in the narrow, confined limits of these shipping-offices. On low benches arranged around the room can be seen at least a dozen men and boys, most of them ragged, dirty, half-starved and forlorn-looking creatures, and some much the worse off with vile rum. How various indeed will be found the incentives which have impelled the poor outcasts to seek the hard and hazardous life which they are about to follow! In almost every instance rum and its necessary consequent poverty have been the great and primal causes of their misfortune. In the clutches of the sharks at almost any time when a vessel is about sailing from New-Bedford on a long whaling voyage, can be seen boys not quite entirely abandoned, but in a fair way of being so; broken-down gamblers who have risked and lost all; men once well off who have been ruined by the frenzy of speculation; in fact the bankrupt merchant, the lawyer, and the poor fellow which strong drink has sent far on the road to ruin, can all be seen commingling and fraternizing on the ground of common misery in the gloomy room of the shipping agent. It is, indeed, a place full of heart-aches. Many of these pitiful creatures have had high aspirations, manhood bright and strong, kindly sympathies and noble impulses, and all this power of mind and heart and spirit lies crushed beneath the overwhelming weight of their misfortune. At best, however, a whaler's crew is an anomalous collection of unfortunate humanity—gentlemen, born and bred, associating with the very lowest grades in the social scale.

It was the misfortune of the writer to be thrown into the company of the crew of a wrecked whaler when on a visit to the Arctic some years ago. The composition of the ship's company was just as it has been described above. There were one or two unfortunate fellows, educated gentlemen, in this crew, who were brought daily into contact with just such characters as the following, and compelled to associate upon terms of intimacy with them. MILLS was an old bounty-jumper, and prided himself upon evading the law and authorities, and boasted of being an ex-hanger-on of some circus company. He was exceedingly ignorant, and like all ignorant men, foolishly prone to vaunt his fancied knowledge. In an extended experience in the army, the writer has never met a being who had so much of the brute and so little of the man in him. He was the only creature in that dissolute, motley mixture of humanity who had not one redeeming virtue; indeed, he seemed to be the embodiment of all that was evil. WOLFE was the perfect prototype of Bill Sykes—lacking perhaps the bravery. A burly, overgrown bully, an adept in blasphemy and ribaldry—in fact, in violence and artistic vituperation he had no equal. Morally a blackguard and physically a giant, he had but one remarkable and redeeming trait, which was his veracity. The misery of a life with such as these for three long years cannot be conceived. Really, DICKENS might have made more frightful characters from these two realities than any Sykes, Fagin, Rogue Riderhood, or others famed in depravity who have shocked the world in romance.

All of these men were driven by the direst necessity to embark in the dangerous calling, and, allured by soft promises into the belief that they would better their pecuniary condition, they willingly seized as anything which gave the faintest promise of alleviating their misery. It is generally not many weeks after the step has been taken before the dreams of modest wealth begin to melt away before the astonished eyes of the amateur whalemen. Worked like slaves and often treated with the most shocking inhumanity, they drag through the long months in the service of men who are well able to better their condition. The history of any one of these unfortunate men, from the time that he first enters the shark's office, on South or West streets, down to the period when his voyage is ended, is nothing more than one long catalogue of sufferings and hardships almost incredible. It seems hard to think, that after being imposed upon and swindled by the shipping agent in the most outrageous manner, and after all his toil, should the vessel return to port filled with oil—of which the man before the mast is supposed to have a share—from keelson to sail, not one can the whaleman claim as his own. With an enormous bill for clothing, for which he is generally charged ten times their value, with three years' interest on the amount, shipping fees that are only another means of illimitable extortion, not the fiftieth part of the sum which has been charged to him will he receive for his labor of three years. Then the poor fellow is, after three long years of incredible hardship, returned to New-London or New-Bedford, a stranger in a strange place, with no friends, no money, not knowing where to go; and all this to increase, by his incessant and fearful toil, the swelling hoards of some city Dives. Surely this is a burning disgrace upon human labor; and in the free, enlightened land of WASHINGTON, that this is so, is a reflection upon the law-makers nothing will expose.

The Union League Club and the Late Election—The Death of Gen. Anderson.

At a monthly meeting of the Union League Club, held at the Club-house on Thursday evening, Nov. 9, the following resolutions, presented by the Executive Committee, were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the signal triumph of the people of the City of New-York in the late election, over the band of unscrupulous leaders who have so long usurped the powers of municipal taxation and government, and perverted them into instruments of plunder and robbery, is at occasions for universal congratulation and joy. Nowhere is the demonstration stronger that even in great cities Republican Government is not a failure; that the citizens of this great Metropolis can safely be trusted to take care of themselves; that an honest ballot betrays on their part a sufficient sense of duties and of their responsibilities; the general desire to these duties is their true and sufficient cure, and that nothing short of the complete extrication of municipal affairs from party politics can result in them corruption and abuse.

Resolved, That the labors of the canvass which culminated in Tuesday's victory were but the beginning of the great work of reform in which the people of this State have to engage. They will demand from the Legislature of the State the immediate repeal of the present charter, under which such unprecedented frauds and crimes have been done, and the formation in its place of a strong municipal government responsible directly to themselves, the passage of a law which will secure purity of elections and a system of taxation in which they shall be directly represented. They are not to be appeased by the dismissal from and flight of the miscreants who have outraged their rights, stolen their property and trampled upon their liberties, but will persist in inflicting upon them the extreme penalty of the law, through criminal suits and without delay. For their thefts and spoliations we demand restitution first and punishment afterward.

Resolved, That, having found the means of cure, we will no longer endure the evils of a degraded or a subservient judiciary, but demand that the charges against the purity and uprightness of our Courts, which have so long poisoned the atmosphere, shall be investigated in the most thorough and searching manner, that innocence may be vindicated and guilt punished, and the fame of our Courts restored to its ancient purity, so that we may live once more in the comforting assurance that justice is neither bought nor sold, denied nor delayed, among us.

Resolved, That an investigation under competent legislative authority should be had into the condition and practices of the various public offices and departments in this City, to the end that extortion and exorbitance may be stopped, and that they may no longer be made a source of revenue for party purposes or corrupt ends; that every public officer should receive a just and adequate compensation, to be fixed by law, and all fees and charges paid into the public Treasury for the public use.

The following resolution was also adopted:

The members of the Union League Club have learned with profound regret of the death in a foreign land of one of our most honorary members, Major-Gen. ROBERT ANDERSON, whose heroism in the defense of Fort Sumter constitutes one of the most honorable events in the history of the late war. In common with our loyal countrymen we deeply mourn the loss of this brave patriot and Christian hero, and we tender to his bereaved family our warmest sympathy.

Should the Mayor be Impeached?

At a meeting of the New-York County Council of the Union League of America, held at their rooms, corner of Bleecker-street and Bowery, last evening, the President, Mr. DAVID B. MERLINS, in the course of an address, after showing that the result of the election meant that no party could be sustained that justified election frauds and felonious administration of public affairs, presented the following somewhat novel ideas in regard to the power of impeachment. The questions of how the Mayor and the heads of departments may be impeached, is one of great and growing interest and importance. By article 4 of the charter, the Common Council have the power of impeachment of the Mayor, and the Mayor has the power of impeaching the heads of departments, and the trial is to be by the full Court of Common Pleas. I desire to show how completely this provision has been a delusion and a snare to the public. I have good reason to believe it was framed with intent to deceive. It holds out the idea that there is some power in the law providing for removing these heads of departments, to be followed by impeachment and trial by the Court of Common Pleas. Now, if the Mayor were impeached, would he not defend on the ground that such proceedings are unconstitutional? And the provision was inserted as it is with that design, and its effect talked about by the parties most interested when the charter was framed. Impeachment is a process of law—it is the exercise of a sovereign function; and as there is about it is in the Constitution; there is not a statute in the world upon the subject. It is not in the common law; there are no decisions. The judiciary article is the only one adopted of all that were presented by the last Constitutional Convention. It provides that the Assembly shall have the power of impeachment by a vote of a majority of all the members elected. The Court for trials of impeachment shall be composed of the President of the Senate, the Senators, or a major part of them, and the Judges of the Court of Appeals, or a major part of them; and judgment in the case of impeachment shall extend no further than removal from office and a disqualification to hold any office of trust or profit under the State Constitution. But the party impeached shall be liable to indictment and punishment according to law. Now, look through the State Constitution from end to end, and you will find that that is the only tribunal clothed with the power of impeachment—the one which is the most direct representative of the sovereign people. This article provides and establishes a Court for the trial of impeachments, and that is the only Court having the constitutional power to try impeachments. The Legislature cannot confer upon any other Court or any other body the power to impeach or to try impeachments. The judgment of impeachment is fixed by the same article, and no Legislature cannot fix another or a different one. Now, may it not be safely assumed that there is not an officer in the State but who is subject to impeachment by the Legislature, and trial by the Court of impeachments? If there be any, it is the only one where a perfect method of removing them is otherwise provided. The charter was apparently framed with the intention of putting the leading officers of the Ring beyond the power of removal by any authority. But, fortunately, the true reading of the Constitution enables them to be removed by the process of impeachment, since the Republicans and Reformers have carried the Legislature. And if they do not have the sense to run away out of the country, so as to vacate their offices, or under the conviction of their guilt go to State Prison of their own accord, the machinery of impeachment will have to be put in operation to punish the men who have offended the law and disgraced the people. Impeachment gives the opportunity to try him. Of course he cannot long remain Mayor.

Will Tweed Abscond?

There was a startling rumor among merchants, and especially importers, yesterday, that WILLIAM M. TWEED was about to flee from the country. It was stated, and very generally believed, that he went down to his insurance company and obtained the privilege of taking a sea voyage. There are some companies where a failure to do so is held to invalidate the policy, and the Mutual, supposed to be the one selected by Mr. TWEED, is one of this sort. When it is remembered that the suit brought against him by the State is to recover $6,000,000 of stolen money, and that his bail covers only $1,000,000, it will be seen at once that the promptest measures are necessary. It is notorious that he has for some time been converting his bonds into cash, and disposing of his mortgages and transferring his real estate to his children. But he owns, in partnership with SWEENEY and others, two entire blocks on Fourth-avenue from Sixty-Seventh to Sixty-ninth streets. There are fourteen four-story brown-stone front houses on these blocks. This property has not been transferred, and will needlessly stamp and offensive expressions on the part of irate English authors who considered that they had been defrauded of their rights. Mr. MACMILLAN, the publisher, with characteristic chivalry, took up his pen on behalf of his American brethren, and showed conclusively, to my thinking, that in the first place, to use hard language about "piracy" was not an effectual mode of persuasion, and in the next place, that the word was inappropriate and unjust. A pirate is one who invades rights of property which are recognized and protected by law. An American publisher who publishes an English book without paying the author is merely availing himself of what is in his country a legal right. Since then the controversy has been calmer, and there seems to be a general agreement that authors should be protected, and that it would be a good thing to have a copyright treaty for this purpose. Mr. APPLETON assents to this, but couples it with a condition of which he does not seem to see the logical weakness. Let English authors have a copyright in the States, he says, but only with American publishers; the book may be written anywhere, but it should be protected only if printed, bound and published in America by an American publisher. In other words, Mr. APPLETON favors free trade for authors, but wants protection for publishers. If there is to be protection, surely American writers are as much entitled to it as American book-sellers. One of the strongest arguments in favor of a copyright treaty is that it would tend to encourage native American literature and prevent the American markets being swamped with foreign trash, which is printed merely because it can be had for nothing, or next to nothing. The upper ranks of American publishers are not only just but generous in their dealings with English authors, and I could give many instances of this. But, of course, they must be governed by commercial considerations, and they have to keep in view that the English works they have paid for may be reprinted next door to them by people who have paid nothing. Considering the amount of capital which is now sunk in the American trade, and the distinguished liberality and enterprise with which, on the whole, it has been conducted, I think it would be very reasonable that the copyright treaty, which I hope will be concluded, should not come into operation immediately, but should be prospective—say to begin five or ten years hence. If American and English publishers were to compete freely with each other, literature would undoubtedly be benefited, and I do not think the Americans would be any losers. One result would be to bring down the price of books in this country to something like the American level. There is a sort of league between the publishers and the circulating libraries to keep up the price of books, in order that people should not buy them, but should read them out of a library. There is one difficulty in the way of a treaty which must not be overlooked, and that is the colonial part of the question. Will Canada and the Australian colonies consent to be bound by an English treaty?

A Man Killed by a Wall from a Scaffold—Another Seriously Injured.

Yesterday morning while two carpenters, CHAS. HOGAN and DANIEL WARD, were employed upon the scaffolding at the top of a new building at Ninth and Washington streets, Jersey City, the wood-work gave way, and both men fell to the ground a distance of forty feet. HOGAN struck the ground first and WARD fell upon him. HOGAN was killed almost instantaneously. WARD had his arm broken and his leg fractured below the knee. Both men were single.

THE BLUBBER HUNTERS.

Nearly all the men that man the large whaling fleets which annually depart from New-Bedford, New-London and Nantucket are procured in New-York, and are almost always poor waifs literally cast upon the world, hungry, homeless and friendless, and in consequence become the easy prey of the cormorants delegated by the owners of the whale-ships in New-England to provide their vessels with crews. In a dingy, dank and dark-looking apartment into which the light of the sun is never seen to enter, and where you are almost stifled by the nauseous vapor emitted from stale tobacco-smoke, moldy furs, damp woolens and other fetid and filthy processes, is located the "office" of the whale-ship agent, who is almost always a retired whaleman, and who is generally better calculated to impose upon the credulity of the homeless wanderers who apply to him to ship. There can hardly be another place in the world where the freaks of fortune can be so thoroughly studied as in the narrow, confined limits of these shipping-offices. On low benches arranged around the room can be seen at least a dozen men and boys, most of them ragged, dirty, half-starved and forlorn-looking creatures, and some much the worse off with vile rum. How various indeed will be found the incentives which have impelled the poor outcasts to seek the hard and hazardous life which they are about to follow! In almost every instance rum and its necessary consequent poverty have been the great and primal causes of their misfortune. In the clutches of the sharks at almost any time when a vessel is about sailing from New-Bedford on a long whaling voyage, can be seen boys not quite entirely abandoned, but in a fair way of being so; broken-down gamblers who have risked and lost all; men once well off who have been ruined by the frenzy of speculation; in fact the bankrupt merchant, the lawyer, and the poor fellow which strong drink has sent far on the road to ruin, can all be seen commingling and fraternizing on the ground of common misery in the gloomy room of the shipping agent. It is, indeed, a place full of heart-aches. Many of these pitiful creatures have had high aspirations, manhood bright and strong, kindly sympathies and noble impulses, and all this power of mind and heart and spirit lies crushed beneath the overwhelming weight of their misfortune. At best, however, a whaler's crew is an anomalous collection of unfortunate humanity—gentlemen, born and bred, associating with the very lowest grades in the social scale.

It was the misfortune of the writer to be thrown into the company of the crew of a wrecked whaler when on a visit to the Arctic some years ago. The composition of the ship's company was just as it has been described above. There were one or two unfortunate fellows, educated gentlemen, in this crew, who were brought daily into contact with just such characters as the following, and compelled to associate upon terms of intimacy with them. MILLS was an old bounty-jumper, and prided himself upon evading the law and authorities, and boasted of being an ex-hanger-on of some circus company. He was exceedingly ignorant, and like all ignorant men, foolishly prone to vaunt his fancied knowledge. In an extended experience in the army, the writer has never met a being who had so much of the brute and so little of the man in him. He was the only creature in that dissolute, motley mixture of humanity who had not one redeeming virtue; indeed, he seemed to be the embodiment of all that was evil. WOLFE was the perfect prototype of Bill Sykes—lacking perhaps the bravery. A burly, overgrown bully, an adept in blasphemy and ribaldry—in fact, in violence and artistic vituperation he had no equal. REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

Although the attendance at the Exchange yesterday, Nov. 9, was large, and the class of real estate offered for sale in variety and value better than usual, bidding was inactive, and the result of the day's transactions not as successful as was anticipated. The following is a list of the property sold:

By A. J. BLESCKER, SON & CO., under an order of the Supreme Court, in foreclosure, CHAS. M. MARSH, Esq., referee, the five-story brick store and lot No. 25 Maiden-lane, purchased by JOHN COX, the present occupant, for $69,500.

By MULLER, WILKINS & CO., as public auction, a three-story high-stoop brown-stone front house and lot, located on the north side of Seventy-first-street, between Broadway and Ninth-avenue, purchased by ALBERT BELLAMY for $16,900. Also, at an executor's sale, a lot on the east side of Third-avenue, 25.8 feet north of Ninety-first-street, purchased by SAMUEL KAUFMAN for $6,100.

By JAMES M. MILLER, at public auction, the four-story English basement brick house and lot, No. 230 West Twenty-fifth-street, south side, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, sold for $14,000 to STEPHEN VAN RAMSE, and 46 feet easterly, at the same sale, the four-story brick store and lot, No. 414 East Twenty-fifth-street, south side, between Avenue A and First-avenue, purchased by Mr. MCCABE for $14,000.

By E. BERGEN, to close a partnership interest, 93 63-100 acres of land, with handsome house thereon, located at West Flushing, Newtown, Long Island, and recently occupied by CHARLES L. Other property, offered by various auctioneers, was disposed of as follows: Four-story brick and stone house and lot No. 30 East Ninth-street, near Broadway, offered by V. K. STEVENSON & SON, at an executor's sale, withdrawn; four four-story brick stores and lot, No. 2,354 to 2,360 Fourth-avenue, west side, between One Hundred and Twenty-fourth and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth streets, offered by MULLER, WILKINS & CO. at public auction, also withdrawn; and a house and lot on Fortieth-street, near Tenth-avenue, advertised for sale by MARSH, M. MILLER, under order of the Supreme Court, by Referee Marsh, also adjourned until the 16th inst. No further business was transacted.

Today, at the Exchange, property on Crosby-street will be offered at auction by E. H. LUDLOW & CO., and two legal sales will be conducted by JOSEPH MCGUIRE, of which real estate located respectively on Fourth-avenue, and on the corner of Water and Roosevelt streets, will be sold:

THE MORMONS.

The Hawkins Trial—History of the Case—The Story of the Injured Wife—Specious Arguments for the Defence—Scenes in the Court.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SALT LAKE CITY, Saturday, Oct. 28, 1871.

At last the verdict has been rendered and sentence passed against THOMAS HAWKINS, the would-be martyr, but convicted criminal, of the Church of Latter-Day Saints. At 12 o'clock today Chief-Justice MCKEAN pronounced the sentence of three years' imprisonment and five hundred dollars' fine against HAWKINS, who was, by the unanimous verdict of a jury of his peers one week since, found guilty of the crime of adultery with ELIZABETH MEARS and SARAH DAVIS. The case has been the all-absorbing theme of conversation in every hotel, office, store, saloon, and public gathering, and by every Brigade in this City for a fortnight past. Aside from its intrinsic interest, an unusual degree of importance attaches to the trial, as being the first indictment of a polygamist for the offence of adultery under the guise of polygamy, ever brought to trial in Utah. The history of the case may be briefly told. The defendant, THOMAS HAWKINS, was married to his first wife, MARGINE, in Birmingham, England, twenty-two years since. Soon after their marriage they removed to this Territory, where they have ever since resided. Until 1870 the defendant proved a kind and indulgent husband, and HARRIET a loving and devoted wife. The evil spirit of polygamy, however, took possession of the man, and he introduced into his family ELIZABETH MEARS, and afterward SARAH DAVIS, whom he claimed as his wives under the practice of the Mormon Church, and the former of whom has borne him three children. The indictment was brought under a Territorial statute approved by BRIGHAM YOUNG himself, when Governor of Utah, March 6, 1852, which reads as follows:

"Every person who commits the crime of adultery shall be punished by imprisonment, not exceeding twenty years, and not less than three years, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, and not less than three hundred dollars; or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the Court. And when the crime is committed between parties, any one of whom is married, both are guilty of adultery, and shall be punished accordingly. No prosecution for adultery can be commenced but on the complaint of the husband or wife." [Laws of Utah, chapter 22, section 31.]

After a vain attempt to procure a continuance of the cause until the Spring term, it was finally set for trial upon the 18th inst. A day and a half was spent in impaneling a jury—all who believed that, under the teachings of the Mormon Church, a man might cohabit with more than one woman and yet be innocent of adultery, being rightly excluded.

The principal witness upon the part of the prosecution was HARRIET HAWKINS, wife of the prisoner, and the simple story of her wrongs afforded a better idea of the inner workings of the Mormon doctrines than all the volumes that have ever been published on the subject. A slight, delicate woman of perhaps forty, though worn and faded beyond her years; a face graven with deeper lines than are traced by years alone; a woman's voice with now and then a perceptible accent betraying her English birth; and under all, the deepest purpose of a woman who could never submit to dethronement from her place in the family circle or to see her cherished Lares cast in the dust.

Her simple story was that of thousands of heartbeaten in Utah. A husband kindly disposed at the first, and until her fading physical charms had lost their sway, and then, under the guise of religious duty, as whatever cost of happiness to the wife of his youth, cohabits with a servant in the family, whom he seeks to elevate to the dignity of wifehood, through the abominable ceremony of the Endowment House. When remonstrated with by his legitimate wife upon his conduct, he tauntingly assured her that he was "doing religious duties," that "she had had her day, and he must have a younger woman." And so this terribly injured wife, who had borne him seven children, who had worn out the bloom of her youth and womanly charms, as a loyal wife, was displaced by a younger woman. A short but terrible recital for a loving woman to make.

The case was clearly proven by her testimony alone, and the sickening details may be spared your readers. Her daughter, a fair-faced girl of sixteen, then took the stand, and corroborated her mother's evidence.

The sole witness introduced by the defense was one TATHAM, by whom two points were established, on which counsel based their entire defense: First, that HAWKINS had married the woman MEARS in accordance with the rites of the Church, and had introduced her to society as his wife; and, second, that the doctrine of plural marriages is a cardinal feature of the Mormon faith, claiming divine revelation for its origin and foundation.

The arguments upon both sides were very good. MAXWELL opened the cause for the prosecution, followed for the defense by MYNER and FITCH, lately brevetted to the rank of counsel to the Prophet. BASKIN, for the Government, closed in an able argument of two hours' duration. Of course, the defense contended, with an air of well-assumed gravity, that HAWKINS, having cohabited with the women named in the indictment under the sanction of the Church, was guilty of no criminal intent, and of course the argument met with the contempt it deserved.

I have attended many criminal trials in Courts of Justice, but I never before witnessed such a display of legal gymnastics as that of the defense in this case in urging with serio-comic gravity that, because a polygamic Legislature had enacted the statute, and the prince of all polygamists had affixed thereto the gubernatorial sign-manual, no conviction of a polygamist should be had thereunder. Because, forsooth, these Mormon statesmen of twenty years ago had enacted a stringent law against adultery, they themselves being chief of all adulterers, adultery in Utah should thenceforth and forever go unpunished. The familiar truism of the law, that the intent of the law-maker should govern in the construction of statutes, was surely never before so distorted. That a statute clear, distinct, explicit and unmistakable in its terms, should be so construed, only assumes the straits to which counsel were reduced in attempting to disguise the weakness of a bad cause. This pitiful quibbling was well met by the Chief Justice in his charge to the jury. Said he:

"Suppose in the reign of King HENRY VIII. the English Parliament had passed an act prohibiting adultery and pronouncing penalties upon it; suppose some man were indicted under it; the objection is taken that the construction given by the prosecution is not the just construction. Why? Because King HENRY VIII. was one of the most licentious adulterers that ever sat upon the English throne, and when he signed and approved that act of Parliament he could not have meant any such thing. What would the Courts do? They would read the act. If it were plain, clear, distinct in its terms, so that there was no opportunity of misunderstanding it, the Court would say, 'we care nothing about the character of the King who signed the act; there is the law, it must be enforced.'"

Verily to the Mormon heart there is no sting so keen as the consciousness that they are caught in the meshes of the net they themselves have woven.

Ten minutes' consideration upon their verdict, nine of which were spent in reducing it to writing, found the jury a unit, and HAWKINS a convicted criminal. Tuesday, the 24th inst., had been fixed as the day for pronouncing sentence, but a delay was granted until today, to allow defendant's counsel to obtain a transcript of the reporter's notes of the trial, on which to found a motion for a new trial, and one in arrest of judgment. These were argued and overruled this morning, and at 12 o'clock sentence was pronounced.

In so far as it was simply the sentencing of THOMAS HAWKINS for the crime of adultery, it possessed no special interest. An American citizen, tried before an American Court and jury, for an offense—shall we say it—essentially American, was about to receive the penalty for his crimes. But, in a broader view, it was not the sentencing of a man but of a system. This paltry criminal, whom one need only see to pity and despise, for the time being, was dignified with an importance which his craven spirit ill-deserved.

Here, face to face, and for the first time, were arrayed in direct antagonism, two distinct ideas, two civilizations, two systems. On the one side law, order, good government, justice. On the other a cruel Church and crafty priesthood, whose by murder, arson, lust and rapine, had for a quarter of a century defied the Great Republic, and now, at last, brought to bay.

An under-sized man of perhaps forty-five years, sladen gray, with a face whose expression exhibited religious fanaticism, hypocrisy and sensual lust, was brought in by the Marshal. A meekness of gait and aspect that might have been real, but was more likely assumed to sustain the rôle of martyr; a hesitancy of manner, a faded blue eye, a round head, whose bald front shone like a billiard ball, thin yellowish hair and a protruding forehead—these were the peculiarities that struck the spectator when THOMAS HAWKINS was brought in for sentence.

The eager interest with which the audience listened to every syllable of the sentence, added to the dramatic force of the scene. The prisoner was remanded to the care of the Marshal, and confined at Camp Douglas, while the case is to be carried to the Supreme Court of the Territory on bill of exceptions.

But the day's chapter of Mormon sorrows was not yet ended, and the tribulation of the Saints not yet consistent. The afternoon had not worn away when the city was ablaze with excitement over the arrest of a pillar of the Church, under an indictment for a murder committed as long ago as 1857. DANIEL H. WELLS, Apostle of the Church of Latter-day Saints, Lieutenant-General of the Nauvoo Legion, member of the Council of Twelve, Mayor of the City of Salt Lake, Chief Justice of the whilom State of Deseret in the palmy days of '57, grown gray in iniquity and rolling in the wealth extorted from the priest-ridden people of Utah, was arrested like the common criminal he is, by the United States Marshal. It never rains but it pours, and with him, and at almost the same hour, were bagged HOSEA STOUT and GEORGE KIMBALL, son of the celebrated HEBER C. KIMBALL, both of whom were also indicted for murder. The illustrious triumvirate of accused murderers were taken before Chief Justice MCKEAN, who remanded them. The Marshal then formed his prisoners in procession, and in half a dozen comfortable carriages, escorted by a numerous staff of Deputy Marshals as outriders, the cavalcade proceeded to Camp Douglas, the sidewalks being lined with scowling saints and jubilant sinners.

In the meantime the air is full of rumors of an impending crisis, the absurdity of some not preventing their finding ready credence among timorous Gentiles.

One fact, which, in the present state of affairs, may or may not be prophetic of coming evil, is the absence of BRIGHAM YOUNG. Deputy Marshal GILSON, who has just returned from a trip south, in which he arrested the murderer MASCHEIM, (found secreted in a straw-stack,) tells me that he saw BRIGHAM, with his vicegerent, GEORGE H. SMITH, at Provo, on Wednesday last, in attendance upon a general muster of the Nauvoo Legion. Between five and six hundred men were drilling under BRIGHAM'S own supervision, and they were for the most part well-armed and equipped. It is somewhat significant, however, that no ramrodder has ever been perpetrated by the Saints in this city without the Prophet having first taken the precaution to absent himself. Law-abiding citizens, as they meet each other on the streets, may well ask, with bated breath, what next?

J. L. H.

SIXTH SENATORIAL DISTRICT.

A Peep Behind the Scenes—How Tom Creamer Saved $25,000, and How Henry Weltmer Lost that Amount.

On the return of the "Hon." THOMAS J. CREAMER from Europe he learned that while he had been absent the friends of MAGNUS GROSS were endeavoring to obtain the nomination of the latter for the Senate in the Sixth District. Upon a careful survey of the the field he also ascertained that the district had a very large majority of Democratic German voters, and that, although the nomination of a Senator from Tammany Hall was promised him by the Ring previous to his departure for Europe, the claims for a German representative in that district could not, as matters then stood, be ignored. He was no friend to MAGNUS GROSS, so when he found that his chances for success were gone he favored, and assisted in placing OTTO MEYER and MARTIN MACHTEMAN, before the people to forestall and "squelch" any movement GROSS or his friends should make to secure the indorsement of Tammany Hall. MAGNUS GROSS' early movements against Tammany Hall all his chances for an indorsement from that quarter, and so other and new plans were then set in motion. CHAS. E. LOEW came forward and demanded the nomination of HENRY WOLTMAN, the Ring consented, and OTTO MEYER and MARTIN NACHTMAN were requested to withdraw in favor of him. NACHTMAN would not agree to the new deal, and said he would not withdraw; he thought he had a large majority of the Germans with him, and claimed to control all the Catholic votes in that district.

After Tammany Hall nominated WOLTMAN, NACHTMAN made strenuous efforts to obtain the indorsement of the Reformers, but the Committee of Seventy knew his previous record at Albany too well to be caught in their trap, so they recommended Dr. WEISSMANN, who was subsequently elected. A few days previous to the election it occurred to THOMAS J. CREAMER that while three Germans were running a most favorable opportunity was now presented for him to keep GRIBBY, NORTON and TWEED company in Albany this Winter, and regain what he deemed to be lost—the Senatorship of the Sixth District.

The plan was put in operation; the most popular German—WOLTMAN—must be bought, so an offer of $20,000 was immediately tendered him to withdraw in favor of CREAMER. The person who made the offer was authorized to pay $20,000 if he could not accomplish the deed with less. WOLTMAN consulted his bosom friend, CHAS. E. LOEW, who advised him not to accept any amount, as he was sure of an election.

Result—WOLTMAN'S campaign cost between $10,000 and $15,000, which was paid by CHAS. E. LOEW, and strange to say, WEISSMANN, WOLTMAN, NACHTMAN and CREAMER all pretend to be pleased with the results of the election.

Election Offenders to be Prosecuted—Places to be Contested.

Numerous complaints were made and affidavits prepared, yesterday, in regard to frauds committed by Tammany repeaters, inspectors, and policemen on election day. On the strength of the evidence which has been accumulated several candidates intend contesting the seats of the Tammany men elected in their districts, on the ground that their election was secured by unfair means. It is understood that O'DONOVAN ROSSA will contest TWEED'S place in the Senate, and will adduce ample evidence and witnesses to show that he was selected by false voting and fraudulent counting.

WM. MCMAHON, the Reform candidate for Assembly in the Fourth District, will also contest the election of JOHN J. BLAIR for that district, and Mr. KILLIAN will contest FRESH'S election. A large number of Reform workers have complained that they were maltreated through the orders of inspectors, and were denied admission to the polls, and their sworn statements will be used to oust the fraudulently elected candidates from their positions. Mr. ABRAHAM R. LAWRENCE, of No. 20 Nassau-street, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Democratic General Reform Committee, heard several charges against fraudulent voters and dishonest inspectors, yesterday. The testimony against the accused, whose names are withheld for the present, will be sent to the District-Attorney for official action.

Seventh Assembly District Republican Association.

At the Republican head-quarters of the Seventh Assembly District, a large crowd of people assembled last evening to rejoice over the Republican triumph. Chinese lanterns and tar-barrels were in profusion, and general festivity was the order of the night. The meeting took place at 7½ o'clock, GEORGE CLARKE presiding. Mr. CLARKE spoke of the dignity of the ballot-box and of the various forms of redressing abuses in office. The people, he said, now appeared to be determined that the ballot-box should never be diverted from the sacred and legitimate objects to which it had originally been destined. An opportunity was given the people of the City to obtain a charter which would uphold them in their rights, and the City and State were redeemed from the continued misrule and plunder of the Democrats, who had shown a thorough incapacity to govern the people. Again a United States Senator was secured in the place of Hon. ROSCOE CONKLING. The track was, in a word, cleared for the future successful triumph of ULYSSES S. GRANT, who had been successful in restoring the ship of state through many of the dangers which beset her. A letter was here read by Mr. CLARKE, from ERASTUS C. BENEDICT, Esq., Senator elect, stating his inability to be present, as he was unexpectedly called off to Washington. Singular to state, the reading of the letter had but just been ended, when Mr. BENEDICT entered the room and met with a most enthusiastic reception. He returned the [illegible] and [illegible] at 12 o'clock on [illegible] evening. At 12 o'clock one would have [illegible] heard [illegible] sound [illegible] sitting place in the city only two short hours before, so quiet and deserted were its streets.

Negro-alley now, externally, has its usual appearance when viewed in the distance; but a close inspection of the walls of the buildings gives substantial evidence of the scene it underwent. The whitewashed adobe walls have been liberally colored with bullets. The doors are riddled; one door alone contains as many as forty holes piercing it. Inside everything is in disorder. Furniture, trunks, crockery, and other perishable goods, have been destroyed; even partitions have been knocked down, bedrooms displaced; in fact everything is a complete wreck.

It is believed that the majority of those lynched were innocent of the crime for which they suffered, and that most of the guilty ones had escaped during or after the time of the riot. But retribution is now likely to fall on the heads of the guilty ones at least, the shadows of its coming are being cast around them. WO HING, the shooter of Officer BILDERRAIN, is in jail, and two Americans are also abiding in the same place—one for breaking open a trunk in a China house, and the other for robbing the Chinese doctor, while hanging, of diamond rings, which were found in a pawn-shop. Others have been "spotted," as having something to do with the lynching and plundering, and the officers "shadow" them day and night. The Coroner's inquest has not yet terminated. It has now occupied two days and sits again at 2 P. M. It continues to-day. Many witnesses have been examined, and a number more will come up to-day. Three men have been implicated by the evidence elicited and placed in jail. It is more than likely that others will be implicated also before the examination is completed. A special Grand Jury has been ordered by the County Judge, and those now under arrest will be indicted to appear before it.

Serenade to James Fisk, Jr.

At the close of the play in the Grand Opera-house, last evening, about 100 musicians, members of the Achenbrodel Society, serenaded JAMES FISK, JR., in honor of his having donated $2,000 to the musicians of New-York. The serenade took place opposite the residence of Mr. FISK, in Twenty-third-street, next door to the Opera-house. The street and the stoops of the houses around were crowded with delighted listeners, fully 1,000 people being present. It was noticeable that the doors and windows of the houses around were all closed and darkened, not a head appearing from the inside. When Mr. FISK appeared on the stoop of his residence he was received with a faint cheer. The serenade opened with the overture to "WEBER'S "Freischutz." Selections from "Rigoletto" and others were rendered in very fine manner and effect. The music was conducted by CARL BERGMAN. At the conclusion Mr. FISK returned thanks and invited the musicians and a number of friends to a collation in the vestibule of the Opera-house.

Notification of the Present Post-Office Regulations.

Notice has been given that the following prepaid rates of postage are in full of all charges to destination on letters for France and Algeria forwarded via England:

For letters not exceeding one-third ounce in weight, ten cents.

For letters exceeding one-third ounce and not over one-half ounce, sixteen cents.

For letters exceeding two-thirds ounce and not over one ounce, twenty-six cents.

and so on, adding four cents for each half ounce for United States and ocean postage and six cents per one-third ounce for British and French postage. The Postmaster-General has been notified by the postal administration of Germany that in consequence of the definite treaty of peace with France, the places named below, situate in Alsace and Lorraine, remain in possession of France, namely: Belfort, Beaurecours, Boel (Bourogue), Breum (Fontaine), Detterried (Delle) Giromagny, Welsches, Rappelent, La Chappelle Sous Rougenou Cereg-ander Voyeuse, Mars la Tour and Moncelander Sellle. Correspondences for the several places named should therefore be despatched in the mails for France, subject to the same postage rates and conditions of payment as those applicable to similar correspondence addressed to other parts of France.

Singular but Ineffectious Remedy for Cancer.

WILLIAM WOLF, a native of France, forty-six years of age, was found dead, yesterday, at St. Vincent's Hospital by Coroner YOUNG, and upon investigation his case was found to present some singular features. It appears that he has been afflicted with cancer of the stomach for some time, and, being in a rural village, six weeks ago consulted a female physician, who advised him, as a remedy, to swallow half a pound of shot and walk briskly about for two or three hours, which would produce the desired relaxation. He did as she directed, but the prescription produced at the time nothing but nausea by which a portion of the shot were ejected. The patient becoming worse was brought to the City and to St. Vincent's Hospital, where he died Wednesday afternoon. Dr. MAREN made a post-mortem examination of the body, and found two ounces of shot in the stomach and the pyloric orifice nearly closed by cancerous deposits which had prevented the shot from passing into the intestines. Death, in the opinion of the physician, was caused by gastritis and vomiting, and that the shot were due to the shot in the stomach. The investigation of the case has not been concluded.

Marshal Sharpe Orders "Jim" Irving to be Incarcerated in a United States Fort.

It has been deemed expedient, owing to the dangerous character of "JIM" IRVING, the details of whose arrest appear on our second page, and the men with whom he associates, to place him in a more secure place of confinement than Ludlow-street Jail, and, accordingly United States Commissioner DAVENPORT, yesterday, obtained an order from Marshal SHARPE upon Major-Gen. MCDOWELL to remove IRVING from Ludlow-street Jail to a United States fort. Armed with this order, Commissioner DAVENPORT went last evening in search of Gen. MCDOWELL to serve the order upon him, but was unable to find him up to a late hour last night. IRVING will probably be removed at an early hour this morning. The fact of his arrest and his being taken handcuffed through crowded streets has caused great excitement among his friends.

Serenade to Prominent Nineteenth Ward Citizens.

A large number of citizens of the Nineteenth Ward tendered a serenade last evening to Hon. WILLIAM A. DARLING, United States Appraiser; Hon. SEVERE D. MOULTON, Assemblyman elect, and Hon. CHRISTIAN SCHWARTZ, Assistant Alderman elect. Among those who participated in the demonstration were Messrs. Nathan J. Newwetter, Bogart, Lee, H. Babcock, Lawrence Harney, James McGovern, Dr. O'Brien, Capt. Bryan, and others.
